SOLDIER-CONSCIOUS CROWDS EYEING HUNDREDS OF WEST POINT'S FINEST PARADING PRECISELY ALONG GRANT STREET ..... THE BAND PLAYED AND THE LARGE THRONG CHEERED

DOWNTOWN TRAFFIC SNARLED BY PARADE OF WEST POINTERS

Gray-uniformed West Point cadets, 1,250 strong, swung through the fog-bound downtown district today to the cheers of thousands, heralding the Army-Pitt football game at the Stadium this afternoon.

In Pittsburgh for the first time, the corps of future Army officers, marching with the snap and precision for which they are world-famous, passed in review before Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, Mayor Charles H. Kline and state and city officials in front of the City-County Building.

A roar of applause greeted the trim, erect youths headed by their 90-piece band, as they swept over the Smithfield Street Bridge into Water street and up Grant street past the reviewing stand.

A shower of ticker tape and bits of vari-colored paper fluttered downward onto the heads of the marching cadets as they passed by the Frick and Union Trust buildings while spectators waved and cheered their welcome from hundreds of windows.

Mingled with the gray, black and gold of the Army were the blue and gold of Pitt, as the university band boomed a rousing welcome at the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad Station. Paired off at the start in column of squads the cadets formed into column of platoons for the review, with city motorcycle and mounted police clearing the way.

The throngs that packed the parade route surged into the street at many places, making difficult the task of the police. In Grant street near the reviewing BULLETIN.

STADIUM, Nov. 14.—Pitt and Army were in a scoreless deadlock at the end of the first quarter of their football battle here this afternoon.

By JESS CARVER

STADIUM, Nov. 14.—The Golden Pantehrs, of the University of Pittsburgh, and the Cadets, of United States Military Academy, of West Point, clashed here this afternoon for the first time in their football history in a contest that was marred by a steady drizzle.

Despite the dismal day, the contest brought out an enthusiastic crowd of more than 65,000. The rain started to fall an hour before game time and drenched the early comers who invaded the stadium stands in goodly numbers to watch the military maneuvers of the West Point Cadets. The exhibition by the Cadets was staged before the contest.

The game in detail:

FIRST QUARTER

Capt. Hirshberg, of Pitt, won the toss and elected to defend the south goal. Capt. Price, of Army, taking the alternative, chose to receive.

MacMurdo kicked off for Pitt, booting a short one to Kopchak, of Army, who was nailed in his tracks on the Army 43. Stecker drove right tackle for a yard. MacMurdo made the tackle. Herb gained two yards at right guard. Brown punted to Reider on the latter's 20-yard line.

He ran the ball back to the Pitt 29. Heller failed to gain at right tackle but Army was off side and drew a five-yard penalty. Heller shot off right tackle for seven yards and a first down on the Pitt 41. Reider was thrown for a loss of five yards at left end. Price made the tackle.

Pitt was offside on the next play and drew the penalty. Heller stepped out of bounds for no gain. Collins punted to Stecker on the latter's 43-yard line. He stepped out of bounds after receiving the long punt.

Stecker failed to gain on a crack at center. He was stopped by Hart Morris. Brown punted to Less Copper, Less Silver.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IF YOU PLAN a war, or any energetic thing that might cause criticism, it is well to build up a "cause," and have your quarrel just.

Japan intends to take Manchuria, needing room, a great deal of it, for a Japanese overflow of many millions. Manchuria would suit, since Japan cannot colonize the North American Pacific Coast.

TO TAKE MANCHURIA, and send in Japanese as rulers immediately, might seem a little "raw," in the language of the United States. Orientals object to anything of that kind.

The plan is to take the young deposed Chinese boy emperor, Henry Pu-Yi, and send him as pseudo emperor of Manchuria, actual representative and dummy for Japan.

The Chinese Manchu dynasty, to whose power Pu-Yi is natural heir, came from Manchuria, owned the place. What more natural than to make the boy emperor Manchurian emperor once more, Japan ruling and owning, under the convenient shadow of his name, as the old Japanese shogunate once ruled in the name of the mikado.

TOKIO REPORTS that Japan is "losing hope of averting a clash," which is like a fox in the pink of condition saying:

"I am afraid I shall have to bite that fat goose after all."

That England sides with Japan in the controversy, apparently on general principles, is also interesting. Japan and Britain had a close alliance for defense, until the Washington conference, which made it worth

POWERS, GUARDED, PLEADS NOT GUILTY

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 14. (AP.)—Harry F. Powers pleaded not guilty today to charges of killing Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher and her three children, of Park Ridge, Ill., and Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Worcester, Mass.

Powers is accused of luring the women here with promises of marriage, killing them, and burying their bodies in a ditch near his garage at Quiet Dell, near here.

Mrs. Eicher and her children disappeared in June from their Park Ridge home. Their bodies were not found until late in July. Mrs. Lemke's body was found several days later.

Powers was taken into court for arraignment this morning under a heavy guard. A menacing crowd of three or four hundred persons were gathered to see the prisoner.

The prisoner's counsel petitioned for a change of venue, averring that Powers could not obtain a fair trial in Harrison County.

Powers was brought here from the state prison at Moundsville to plead. He was taken to the state penitentiary September 20 for safe-keeping after a mob gathered about the county jail here.

Five separate indictments were returned against the man, one for each of the killings. He pleaded not guilty to each indictment.

JAPAN OPENS DRIVE, CHINA RALLIES ARMY

By EDWARD HUNTER
Universal Service.

MUKDEN, Nov. 14.—The "big push" of the Japanese Manchurian army on Tsitsihar began today with Gen. Mah Chan-Shan, Chinese leader, directing a counter-offensive to prevent the seizure of the capital.

Gen. Shigeru Honjo, Japanese commandant here, announced that four Japanese soldiers had been killed and that Chinese had carried a wounded Japanese from the field, when Chinese cavalry attacked and wiped out a Japanese sentry post in the Anganchi region.

Powerful Chinese cavalry forces are massing behind the Japanese right at Tahsing, north of the Nonni River, it was reported here. There are 2,000 Japanese troops at Tahsing, to be utilized as the spearhead of the Japanese drive. Two thousand more Japanese troops are stationed along the Taonan-Anganchi Railroad between Ssupingkai and Tahsing.

It is officially reported here that Gen. Mah Chan-Shan has com-

Boy Prisoner In Garage 3 Days

Missing from his home since Armistice Day, Russel Irvine, 12, of 1557 Marie street, Wilkinsburg, was found in a semi-conscious condition by two playmates today in an unoccupied garage in the rear of 1834 Montier street, where he apparently had imprisoned himself. Unable to talk, he could noly nod his head feebly to questions, admitting he ran away from home and locked himself in the garage.

The boy was last seen Wednesday morning, playing football near his home. His father, Frank Irvine, notified Wilkinsburg police when he failed to return home at night and members of the family had searched the neighborhood for three days.

William McDonald, 10, of 1832 Montier street, and Jack King, 14, of Wright street, playing around the garage this morning saw the slumped body of their chum when they peered into one of the two garage windows. They forced open the door, barred on the inside, and carried the boy to the McDonald home where Mrs. Mae McDonald, William's mother, administered first-aid.

Mrs. Frank Irvine, the boy's stepmother, was notified and an older brother carried the youngster to his home and a physician was called. Mrs. Irvine said the boy was suffering from exposure and hunger and was in a serious condition.

She could assign no reason for the boy's desire to leave home.

Comptroller Meets Closed Bank Heads

Officials of the closed Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., held further conferences yesterday with John W. Pole Comptroller of the Currency, in Washington, on plans by which it is hoped to reorganize and reopen the closed bank. Although no definite plan has been reached, Pole said considerable progress had been made in the discussion of several phases of the proposed reorganization.

30,000 SEE SKIBOS MEET TEMPLE ELEVEN

TEMPLE STADIUM, PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—Perfect football weather prevailed as Carnegie Tech and Temple University's elevens clashed here today. A crowd of 30,000 saw the game.

Just before the game, Judge Walter P. Steffen, head coach at Carnegie, verified his announcement of last Thursday in Chicago that he desired to withdraw from coaching this season.

However, Graduate Manager Overend and Steffen conferred all this morning, with the former making an effort to have the judge reconsider his decision.

No definite decision was reached here, but the Carnegie Tech Athletic Council will meet Monday evening to talk over the situation. It is understood that Carnegie authorities will endeavor to hold Steffen at the school in an advisory capacity, which he assumed when he first went on the bench in Chicago.

This season Steffen has been in active charge of the squad, and the worries of the season have weighed heavily upon him far from the scene of action as he is during the week.

Some kind of agreement between Steffen and the Tartan athletic authorities is expected to be reached next week.

GRID TITLES PRIZES IN BATTLES TODAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Skirmishes of major importance were offered on several college football battlefronts this afternoon.

In the South, Georgia's undefeated eleven met Tulane's powerful grid machine at Atlanta in a game that probably will decide the 1931 championship of the Southern Conference.

In the Mid-West, Northwestern, undefeated and leading in the race for the Big Ten title, sought to retain its lead against Indiana. Harvard met Holy Cross, Syracuse opposed Colgate and Dartmouth was host to Cornell in features games in the East.

VOTE MACHINE FIRM WINS $400,000 FIGHT

Judge Elder W. Marshall today granted the Poole Engineering and Machine Company petition for $400,000 balance due on vote machines delivered to the county.

The company was granted a writ of mandamus on Controller Robert G. Woodside and County Treasurer John Francies, after an effort had been made to stop payment on machines delivered or the delivery of other machines.

An additional 1,001.60 was awarded, respresenting damages for inconvenience.

65,000 GREET CADETS AS RAIN SOAKS FIELD

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

STADIUM, Nov. 14.—A soaking rain, which began shortly after noon, put a damper on the enthusiasm of the crowd that turned out for the Army-Pitt football game here this afternoon.

A heavy fog hung over the field and umbrellas were raised in the stands, while blankets were used to good advantage.

The crowd began arriving early, in response to repeated warnings of possible traffic jams, and early filled the bowl in scattering fashion.

The early-comers trooped in leisurely fashion and appeared to be good-humored despite the frowning of the weather on what was slated to be Pittsburgh's greatest football spectacle, with the Army Corps parading on the field before the start of play.

An empty section yawned in the west stands behind the Army bench. It was reserved for the Cadet Corps, which was slated to make its appearance on the field at 1:45 o'clock.

At 1 o'clock, the rain was coming down heavily on the just and unjust alike. The fans were coming in jostling numbers now, and

CITY POLICE DETAIL SETS NEW RECORD

Every available detective in the city service was detailed today by Detective Inspector Frank Boyd to strategic points in connection with the visit of the cadets to Pittsburgh.

With a detail of eight men at the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Station when the cadets arrived, another detail at East Liberty Station, where Secretary of War Hurley detrained, and another detail at the home of James Francis Burke, host to the war secretary, the rest of the detectives were assigned to street duty in the downtown district and at the Stadium for peak crowds.

At the Stadium, Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh had the largest force of patrolmen, mounted officers and motorcycle patrolmen ever assembled here for an athletic event. Under the command of Assistant Police Supt. B. R. Marshall and Traffic Inspector Jacob Dorsey, 450 men were assigned for the handling of traffic.

HOOVER PROPOSES NEW U. S. BANKS TO AID HOME BUILDING

$1,800,000,000 TO BE FREED FOR LOANS

President Recommends One Branch for Each Federal Reserve Zone; End Slump

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14. — (AP) — A $1,800,000,000 blast beneath the frozen home building credit jam is planned by President Hoover through the creation of a nation-wide string of new federal banks.

The President announced late yesterday he would request Congress create the system, a loan discount banks authorized at around $150,000,000 and capable of advancing 12 times that amount to institutions dealing in small mortgage loans. He expects the results to appear within six. Among those hoped for listed:

A revival of home building and a resultant increase in employment.

An emergency easing of financial strain upon sound banks and loan associations dealing in home building securities.

A safeguarding against future building slumps.

A long-time promotion of home ownership through the financial strengthening of credit institutions.

The chief executive's sudden launching of his plan caused some surprise. Although he has conferred twice recently with groups of bankers, real estate and building and loan association men, still another such conference is scheduled for next week.

BUILDING CONFERENCE

Then, early in December, he will meet with a White House conference on home building and home ownership planned as the first of its kind and expected to delve into every ramification of the problem.

Mr. Hoover's disclosure of his $800,000,000 national credit corporation plan of seven weeks ago contained no forecast of the present discount bank proposal. The proposed institution, he said, will not displace the former, but is intended to "occupy an entirely different field of action."

2 BILLION OUTLAY

Since more than 300,000 homes are erected annually in normal times, contributing with furnishings, to expenditures of over $2,000,000,000 a year, the President hopes for a sharp revival of employment from the operation of his proposal. He said:

"A considerable part of our unemployment is due to stagnation in residential construction. It is true there has been some overbuilding in certain localities in the boom years.

"But even in these localities the inevitable need is obscured by the tendency of the population to huddle temporarily due to unemployment. The real need steadily accumulates with increasing population and will become evident and insistent as we come out of the depression."

Here are some elements of the President's proposal:

One bank would be established in each of the 12 federal reserve districts, if necessary.

Each would be capitalized initially at from $50,000,000 to $20,000,000.

In order to restrict the aid to smaller homes and farms, no mortgage loan of over $15,000 would be eligible for collateral.

The initial capital would be subscribed by the institutions to participate as was done with the Federal Reserve banks, with the government subscribing any amount not thus provided.

pleted the massing of his forces, composed mostly of the Heilungkiang army, Mongol troops, some Russians and Chinese Eastern Railway guards.

Mah's forces, it is said here, total 20,000 men in cavalry, infantry and artillery arms.

Fighting began early in the Nonni River basin area, where reports stated that a band of nondescript but well-armed Bolsheviks from Blagoveschensk, Siberia, aided by a Chinese irregular cavalry corps, had forced a temporary Japanese retreat.

Despite bombardment by Japanese artillery all day yesterday, the Chinese lines south of Anganchi are holding intact.

A Japanese force of 1,800 men, equipped with heavy artillery, crossed the Nonni River today and launched an attack upon the army of Gen. Mah.

DAWES MEETS BRIAND

PARIS, Nov. 14.—(INS.)—Two veterans of international diplomacy, Charles Gates Dawes and Aristide Briand, put their heads together in an office at the Quai D'Orsay today in an effort to work out a solution of the Manchurian crisis.

The American ambassador to Britain visited France's foreign minister shortly before noon, and then repaired to the United States embassy to cable Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson a complete report of the conversation.

With reports persisting that Dawes had worked out a plan of compromise before he left London to be here during the forthcoming League of Nations council meeting, it was assumed his cable informed Secretary Stimson just how Briand felt about the proposal he had to offer.

SEES U. S. AS GOAT

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Senator George H. Moses, Republican, believes the League of Nations is attempting to make the United States "the goat" in the Manchurian situation. In a speech here last night, he said:

"It is most difficult to visualize the domestic situation in Japan, where, apparently, the civil government is at the mercy of militarists.

"There is plenty of evidence that the League of Nations would like to dump the whole Manchurian mess into the lap of America, thus making us the goat. The policy of the administration has prevented this."

Mary Nolan Irate Over Suits for Cash

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 14.—(INS.)—"There are lots of people broke and think because I'm Mary Nolan they can get money from me." Thus, Miss Nolan, screen actress, today struck back at "annoyers" following her apearance in two courts.

She was in court on a charge of failure to pay a $50 modiste's bill, and trial was set for December 8. Leaving the first courtroom, a deputy server her with a summons to appear in another court for failure to appear in a wage claim action. She was released on bond with arraignment set for November 23.

ASKS PINCHOTS GIVE MILLION

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—State Senator Samuel W. Salus suggested yesterday that Gov. Gifford Pinchot and Mrs. Pinchot "start the ball rolling" for the state unemployment relief fund of $35,000,000 to be raised by private contributions "by making individual donations of $500,000, or, if not that, $500,000 between them."

Senator Salus' suggestion came after reports were heard here that the Governor plans to tour Pennsylvania in the role of a salesman to solicit private contributions.

"Gov. Pinchot is a wealthy man," Senator Salus said. "If he and Mrs. Pinchot gave $500,000 each, or $500,000 between them, it would inspire confidence in the bond issue the Governor has proposed."

W. L. Mellon Must Register Again, Board Rules

W. L. Mellon's name will be stricken off the books of the Registration Commission today. It has been on the books only a little more than a week. Churchill B. Mehard, counsel for the Registration Commission, said yesterday that, due to a misinterpretation of the registration act, Mellon had been permitted to register after the general election. He is mailing a letter today notifying Mellon that it is necessary to strike his name from the books. This is what is known as "red lining" in the Registration Commission.

The part of the registration act under which Mellon was permitted to register states that any qualified elector absent from the city on all registration days may at any time not less than two weeks before any election present his petition to be registered to the Commissioners and, after a hearing, be put on the books.

So Mellon's registration was not according to the provisions of the act, according to Mehard, and he will be informed today that he must register all over again on the fifth Wednesday preceding the spring primary election.

CURTIS TO RADIO PLEA FOR U. S. DEFENSE

Vets Arrange Broadcast Of Vice President's Stand Against Foreign Menace

By JOSEPH TIMMONS
Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14. — Responding to an appeal made to him by about a score of prominent veterans, Vice President Charles Curtis told the delegation that after his return to Washington he would be glad to repeat in a nation-wide radio address his declarations here on Armistice Day in favor of an Army and Navy strong enough for national defense and against entangling alliances.

Van Hogan, commander of the Department of California, American Legion, headed the delegation and was spokesman. He will ask national headquarters of the Legion to arrange for the broadcast and to sponsor it.

The veterans saw the Vice President at the close of the Kansas Society reception for him.

VETS LAUD POLICIES

Hogan expressed the ardent enthusiasm of veterans for the policies urged by the Vice President and informed him that, in the convention that the people of the whole country ought to have an opportunity to hear him express them, they had made tentative arrangements for a nation-wide broadcast.

The Vice President was deeply moved by the warm approval of the veterans, and told them that he would gladly make the broadcast in the near future from Washington.

Commander Hogan left last night for Indianapolis to attend the meeting of state commanders and adjutants with the national officers and executive committee.

DEFENSE GUARANTEE

He said:

I shall present this matter to that meeting and urge that national headquarters of the American Legion sponsor a national broadcast by the Vice President in the near future. We veterans who heard him at the Olympic Stadium were greatly impressed with the clarity and simplicity and true eloquence in which he expressed his adherence to exactly what we stand for—an Army large enough and a Navy strong enough for adequate national defense, as a guarantee to the nation of peace with honor, and no entangling alliances.

"We are very much in earnest in our desire that the people of the entire country have an opportunity to hear this sound doctrine from the lips of our Vice President."

MRS. CARAWAY TO 'CARRY ON'

By LUCY SALAMANCA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 — Southern chivalry once more has triumphed over practical politics as Mrs. Hattie Caraway becomes the junior Senator from Arkansas.

Moreover, there is every indication that Mrs. Caraway will be a candidate, and probably a successful one, in the special election on January 12 for the unexpired term of her late husband, Thaddeus H. Caraway, ending in March, 1933.

Nor will Mrs. Caraway have to run on the reputation and the popularity of her husband. She is reputed to be an even better campaigner than he, possessed of the same brilliance, the wit and sharpness of tongue. Preparations already are being made for Mrs. Caraway to carry on her husband's work by reintroducing many of the measures he sponsored.

CONGRESSMEN OFF TO CANADA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Canadian government officials will open their records on the operation of the sales tax system to nearly 100 members of Congress who leave here tonight for a week's study of this form of taxation in the Dominion.

Senators and Representatives of both major parties will join in a study at close range of the Canadian sales tax system in a tour sponsored by William Randolph Hearst. All members of Congress were invited to make the trip.

Members of both parties said they expected to gather much information on the experience of Canada with the sales tax system in operation there for years.

CUPBOARD BABY HELD HARMED FOR LIFE

Mental Scars Permanent, Woman Expert Declares In Report For Grand Jury

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Edith Riley, the cupboard baby, will carry through life the effects of months of solitary confinement in a pitch dark closet and other cruelties allegedly inflicted upon her over a period of four years by her stepmother.

Mrs. Edith Sutherland Elmore, chief psychologist at Gallinger Hospital, and daughter of Justice George Sutherland, of the United States Supreme Court, expressed this opinion in an exclusive interview with International News Service today.

Mrs. Elmore made the intelligence test which led Dr. Joseph Gilbert, psychiatrist of the hospital, to refute the stepmother's assertion that the child was feeble-minded, the excuse given for her confinement in the closet.

FULL RECOVERY DOUBTED

Discussing her conclusions on the test, Mrs. Elmore said:

"Proper care and treatment over a long period may restore energy to the almost lifeless limbs and lift the cloud from the apparently stunted mind, but it does not appear likely that the child ever will fully recover.

"Even if happiness lifts the mask of unnatural solemnity from the pitiful little face, she will probably be subject always to emotional disturbances."

Mrs. Elmore said her test convinced her the child was not feeble-minded and there was nothing to indicate she had ever suffered from idiotic tendencies. She said:

"She is sub-normal at the present time, but certainly not an imbecile.

"She responded to my tests in a highly intelligent manner. She answered most of my questions except when I mentioned her home life. Then she was strangely mute. Her face was expressionless, her hands betrayed no emotion. She just stared straight ahead."

CHILD OBEDIENT TYPE

Mrs. Elmore said the child did not appear the type which would have to be locked up to prevent her injuring herself. She said:

"She is extremely docile and obedient. She follows commands almost automatically, like a robot doll. This gives one the impression she has been subject to severe discipline.

"Of course, we cannot tell whether she was mentally deficient before the alleged ill treatment, but the cruelty and confinement she is alleged to have undergone could cause a normal child to deteriorate to her state."

while for Britain to end that alliance.

Britain is said to have notified the league that it is not interested in any boycott of Japan, diplomatic or otherwise.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS, however, touching the intense pride of Japan, may cause that country to take a short cut through present troubles. Dispatches from Tientsin tell of Siberian "Reds" and Chinese troops under Gen. Mah inflicting a severe defeat on the Japanese, capturing their airplanes.

Japanese suspect that Gen. Mah, aggressive Chinese, has had all along an understanding with Russia, which is probable. Bret Harte's "heathen Chinee" is now a highly civilized Chinese, but still understands "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain."

If Japan has suffered a defeat, she will demand an immediate victory, on a scale to cause the defeat to be forgotten.

A CONVICT was mysteriously murdered by another. The thrust of a sharpened file appears to have done the work. The warden's decision "to call off the proposed football game to which the convicts were looking forward," as a general punishment, is interesting.

Not so long ago, everybody suspected of the crime or of knowing about it would have been put to the torture until desired information had been obtained.

Now prisoners are told:

"You shall not see the football game."

The world has become milder.

A HARBOR for ships up to 30,000 tons, drawing 35 feet of water, is ready at Port Everglades, on the east coast of Florida.

This port, only 17 miles from Miami, costing six millions, will enable very big ships to touch at Florida for the first time.

THAT IS GOOD news for the whole country. What helps one part helps another.

Next should come a deep canal across Florida, enabling coastwise ships to go from the Atlantic into the Gulf of Mexico without traveling around the tip end of Florida through the summer hurricane season, cutting at least 1,000 miles from the New York to New Orleans water trip.

The United States should build that, beginning at Stuart, through the St. Lucie Canal, Lake Okechobee, and on to the gulf.

AN EFFORT to reach a common sense agreement concerning copper, now sold for far less than production cost, fails, because Belgians that own mines in Africa would not consent.

African ore is rich, and in abundance, African semi-slave labor is plentiful and cheap. Lack of agreement among copper men discourages copper production and this inevitably diminishes the output of silver, largely a by-product of copper mining.

Because of greatly increased demand for silver from the East, speculators and some bankers that have sold silver they did not own, are again warned that they are in an unpleasant position.

Since that warning was first published here, silver metal has increased in value more than 20 per cent, and certain imminent developments might increase it 100 per cent.

Speculators on the short side, take warning.

NEWSPAPER READERS discuss one of many "interesting American shootings."

A young man named Donaldson, aged 24, wooed too well a girl whose acquaintance he made at 17. The girl's father says Donaldson admitted his guilt in connection with the girl, whom he did not marry.

The girl's brother killed Donaldson and the father relates that Donaldson, a powerful young athlete, made conditions worse by knocking down the girl's father, also knocking down her brother, and knocking out some of his teeth.

The other side of the story remains to be told in court, but, juries and human nature being what they are, if the girl confirms her father's story, it is not probable that her brother will be sent to join Donaldson, via the electric chair.

Killer's Death Would Not Restore Son to Her, Says Bereaved Mrs. Donaldson

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14. — (AP.) — Mrs. Francis A. Donaldson, Jr., who brought two sons to manhood only to have them taken by death, has no desire to see Edwin H. B. Allen go to the electric chair for slaying her elder boy last Monday.

She asks only that "he be punished so that he never can forget the awful thing that he has done," saying:

"Taking the life of Edwin Allen will not bring back my boy to me."

At the same time the society matron gave her version of the misunderstanding which blighted the romance between her son, Francis A. Donaldson III, and Miss Rose E. W. Allen, 18, debutante sister of Edwin.

ASSERTS ALLEN OBJECTED

Horace Allen, father of Rose and Edwin, has said young Donaldson betrayed his daughter and that it was the Donaldsons who opposed the marriage. Mrs. Donaldson yesterday said Allen himself objected to the union at first, declaring:

"Mr. Allen thought Mr. Donaldson had married a domestic in his father's household. To straighten things out, my husband proved this to be untrue and Mr. Allen wrote me an apology. After that there could be no question of his daughter's marrying beneath her.

"I never understood that there was never a definite refusal by Mr. Allen to the marriage. I certainly never heard of a refusal to the marriage on the part of my husband."

Mrs. Donaldson said it was agreed, after her pre-marriage status had been explained to the Allens, that the couple were to marry as soon as young Donaldson was able to support a wife.

SLAYER'S FATHER ILL

Horace Allen, meanwhile, was reported critically ill at the home of friends where he and his daughter are staying. He suffered a nervous breakdown Thursday night and was unable to attend an inquest yesterday.

Miss Allen herself remained away working a jig-saw puzzle while the hearing was in progress.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury was that Donaldson died from a shotgun wound at the hands of Allen.

CLEAR-EYED CADETS, NOBBY IN BARRACKS CAPS AND GRAY CAPES, KEEPING MILITARY TIME TO ONE-TWO-THREE-FOUR AS THEY MOVE SNAPPILY ALONG DOWNTOWN GRANT STREET stand, a motorcycle patrolman was hemmed in by the crowd and had to be rescued by a fellow officer.

Public Safety Director James M. Clark said the crowd in front of the City-County Building was the largest since the Armistice Day of 1918.

Among those in the reviewing stand were Secretary of War Hurley, Mayor Kline, Lieut. Gov. Shannon, James Francis Burke, United States Army officers stationed in Pittsburgh, judges, members of the mayor's cabinet, members of Council and other city and county officials.

The parade was the forerunner of an almost continuous fete for the cadets, which was scheduled to reach a climax tonight with a resplendent military ball in the William Penn Hotel.

SPECIAL TRAINS

The cadets arrived in four special trains, the Red, White, Blue and Green, in command of Lieut. Col. Walter K. Wilson, acting instead of Maj. Gen. William R. Smith, superintendent of West Point, who was prevented from coming to Pittsburgh by bronchitis.

Mayor Kline, Chancellor John G. Bowman, of the University of Pittsburgh; Lieut. Gov. Edward C. Shannon, representing Gov. Pinchot, who could not reach her until just before game time, welcomed Col. Wilson and his student-soldiers at the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Station.

The cadets, in gay mood for the week-end holiday, wore their regulation gray-blue uniforms with overcoats and capes.

Heading the West Point Corps was James B. Mahan, master sergeant and drum major.

Col. Wilson had as his aides Capt. L. L. Martin and Capt. F. L. Parks. Maj. H. R. Harmon, in charge of the train movement, led the first section into the city. Section commanders in addition to Maj. Harmon were Capt. H. A. Barber, Capt. Paul L. Goode and Capt. F. A. Macon.

CADETS IN CHARGE

Cadet Capt. Ellsworth J. Davis, of the 1st Battalion, was the official leader of the parade, which was entirely in charge of the cadets.

Following the parade the soldiers were at liberty for a short time before leaving the downtown for Syria Mosque where they were to have lunch.

They were to march from the mosque to the Stadium at 1:15 p. m., there to give exhibition drills in platoon formation before the game, for the throng of spectators. Between halves the cadets were to participate in a memorial tribute to Knute Rockne.

Secretary Hurley, representing President Hoover, and Mrs. Hurley were to be guests of James Francis Burke at the game and were to attend the ball tonight.

CO-EDS TO DANCE

Several hundred co-eds and debutantes prepared today for the ball in honor of the West Pointers and their football team, scheduled to begin at 8 p. m.

In dress uniforms the cadets were to mingle with Pittsburgh's fairest in the outstanding college social function of the year.

H. L. McGrath, president of the Benny Haven Club, is chairman of the ball committee.

Members of the Reserve Officers Training Corps, Army alumni and honor guests will attend. Addresses are scheduled by Chancellor Bowman, Secretary Hurley and Maj. Gen. Smith.

The West Point choir of 125 will sing "Alma Mater," composed by a Pittsburgher, Maj. Reinecke, and "The Corps."

Secretary and Mrs. Hurley will be honored by the Burkes with a dinner at the Fox Chapel Country Club, this evening.

Fish Says Dreiser, Darrow Peril U. S.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, has asserted that the most dangerous people in the United States were "men like Theodore Dreiser and Clarence Darrow."

In an address here yesterday, Fish, who is chairman of the House Committee investigating Communism in the United States, said that Dreiser would say he was not a Communist, "but he stands for everything the Communists stand for." Darrow, he classed as dangerous because of his ability to get a large audience to believe the American system of government is "all wrong."

Capital Honors Mrs. Hearst In Memorial School Rites

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—(Universal.)—Tiny tots from kindergartens and the capital's outstanding statesmen and educators today will join in tribute to Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst when the corner stone of a new public school, named in memory of her, is laid here.

The new school, designed to be one of the most beautiful in the capital's educational system, will be an appropriate memorial to the ideals toward the fulfillment of which Mrs. Hearst worked unsparingly. She founded the parent-teacher movement and originated kindergarten classes in public schools while residing in Washington during the tenure, in the Senate, of her husband, the late Senator George Hearst, of California.

Two of Mrs. Hearst's grandsons, William Randolph Hearst, Jr., and John Hearst, are coming from New York to set the stone in place.

Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, and Senator Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, will speak. George R. Wales, United States Civil Service Commissioner, will preside.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of Washington schools, will tell of the invaluable contributions made by Mrs. Hearst to the district's education system.

Mrs. Joseph N. Saunders, president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers and an associate of Mrs. Hearst, will tell of their work in Washington.

Representatives of the Board of Education, which voted unanimously to give Mrs. Hearst's name to the new school, also will attend.

OHIO SHERIFF'S SLAYERS DIE

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Walter Ralls, 24, and Blanton Ralls, 19, his nephew, both Negroes, were put to death in the electric chair of the Ohio Penitentiary last night for the killing of Sheriff George Davenport, of Crawford County, almost a year ago.

They went to the chair with little show of emotion, Blanton, first to go, said he was innocent. Walter said that recently Blanton told him he fired the shot that killed the Sheriff.

The two were granted a stay of execution by Gov. George White two weeks ago when Blanton laid the blame on an uncle who was slain in an attempt to escape from jail. The Supreme Court refused to review the case.

Fire Damages Shop In Hill District

Fire early today damaged the Bloomfield Electric Company, 1701 Center avenue. Fire orginated in the rear of the store. Damage was estimated at $500.

Fumes Peril Downtown Merchant

E. E. Peck, owner of the Peck Fish Company, was partially overcome early today as he groped his way through the plant of his company at 106 Second avenue, opening doors and windows to clear the building of ammonia fumes. He staggered to the street to safety.

An ammonia tank connected with the cooling system developed a leak during the night and filled the building with fumes. When Peck arrived for business, he began opening doors and windows. He was on the second floor when he noticed the fumes affecting him. He managed to make his way to the street.

Peck then went to Central Police Station to report the leak. When he returned he found an employe in the building. The two men repaired the leak without any damage.

GRANDI TO TALK ON GERMANY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Europe's irritations growing out of the World War, and especially Germany's plight, will get much of the thought of President Hoover and Foreign Minister Grandi, of Italy, when they draw their chairs together next week at the White House.

Coming only recently from a visit to Germany, the Foreign Minister is convinced that nation is the danger point in the whole European situation. Alleviation of the oppressions and animosities which resulted from the World War, he believes, is the pressing need of the entire continent.

The President received definite impressions of present European conditions, but from the French viewpoint, when he talked recently with Premier Pierre Laval of France.

DR. HUTCHISON W. & J. HEAD

Dr. Ralph C. Hutchison, of Teheran, Persia, dean of the American College there since 1925, has been elected president of Washington and Jefferson College, it was announced today following a meeting of the board of directors of the college last night. Thirty-four years old, he is one of the youngest men in the country to occupy such a position.

Dr. Hutchison succeeds Dr. S. B. Baker, former superintendent of the Pittsburgh public schools, who resigned his position at the college a short time after a walkout by the student body in opposition to Dr. Baker's administration.

Dr. Hutchison was born in Colorado, the son of Dr. Joseph C. Hutchison, of Denver. He was graduated from Lafayette College in 1918 and served in the United States Naval Aviation Corps during the following year. He received his master of arts degree at Harvard University in 1919, his Ph. D. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1925 and the degree of D. D. from Lafayette in 1930.

He also attended the Princeton Theological Seminary and is an ordained minister of the Presbyterian Church.

It is expected that Dr. Hutchison will assume his duties at W. and J. before the first of the year.

Secretary Hurley Here, Denies He's Militarist

Secretary of War Patrick Hurley is not a militarist, and emphasized the statement today as he rested in the home of James Francis Burke, prior to the Pitt-Army football game.

The Secretary is not in favor of building a military organization to such an extent that it would become a menace to any other nation, he said, adding:

"The most reasonable pacifists in the United States are those who have seen war. Anyone who has seen a bayonet charge would sit up all night to avoid another. Everywhere I go they shout militarist at me. I am not one. I believe we should maintain the position of being prepared."

Secretary Hurley said he believes in preparation for national defense as a means of avoiding war.

He was asked:

"Will the proposed reduction in appropriations contract the military establishment?"

H answered:

"No, we are sacrificing neither men nor equipment. We are deferring certain building and making some saving because of reduced prices and costs that has enabled us to co-operate with President Hoover in curtailing expenses for 1933. We have a large deficit in the Treasury and the Army is glad to join in the President's efforts to overcome the present deficit."

PENNSY LEADER ASKS DRIVE AID

Urging support of public relief measures throughout the country by employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad, W. W. Atterbury, president, issued a statement to all branches of the railroad yesterday. He said in part:

"Under the leadership of public spirited citizens throughout the country practically every community has undertaken some plan of unemployment relief so that, in a sympathetic and effective way, those who have may share with those who have not. The magnitude of these efforts emphasizes the seriousness of the needs."

The Women's Aid, a relief organization of the railroad, has spent more than $200,000 for relief during 1931, Atterbury said. A fund of $100,000 has been raised to date to continue the work through the winter, he said, declaring that additional funds will be appropriated by the board of directors if necessary.

Mexican Prisoner Tries Suicide Twice

Juan Oases, 36, Mexican, of Sixth avenue, Homestead, police said, twice attempted suicide in a cell in Homestead Police Station last night. He was committed to jail today. He was arrested on a vagrancy and disorderly conduct charge. Police said Oases first used his belt to hang himself and later a necktie, being cut down by officers both times.

FOUR HOLD UP DINING CAR

Charles Branch, dining car proprietor, of 6383 Penn avenue, early today was robbed of $25 by four armed men who entered his establishment and looted the cash register. Branch told police he was alone in the car when the four men, all described as being about 20 years of age, entered.

Searching along Mulooley avenue, Overbrook, for an address he had been given by his passenger, A. L. Gibson, of 955 High street, North Side, a cab driver, felt a revolver shoved against his side. The passenger leaned through the window near the driver's shoulder and demanded Gibson's money. After stealing $6 the passenger disappeared into the darkness.

Halted by two highwaymen, Thomas Culley, of 231 North Fairmont avenue, was robbed of $52 and identification cards as he entered his home early today.

Thieves stole $35 from the cash register in Darges Market at 914 Chateau street, North Side, police were informed. Entrance was gained through a side window.

Two diamond rings valued at $1,600 were stolen from the home of Mrs. Laura Hutter of 403 Hastings street. Mrs. Hutter informed city detectives today. The rings were stolen sometime between Wednesday night and last midnight, she told detectives.

HOUSE OWNER IN FIRE QUIZ

City detectives today are investigating a fire which last night damaged a vacant 10-room frame dwelling at 22 Saw Mill Run boulevard. The building is owned by Mrs. Nellie Galey, who is living at 50 Saw Mill Run boulevard.

Fire Chief J. H. Frazier, who estimated the loss at $1,000, told police the fire started simultaneously in three sections of the house. Overbrook police notified Michael Goryski, of the bomb and arson division of detectives.

Goryski has asked Mrs. Galey to appear at the Detective Bureau today for questioning.

"Invitation to the Dance," Op. 65 ..... Weber-Weingartner

Last night the Detroit Symphony Orchestra played its annual concert in Syria Mosque. There was noticeably smaller audience than usual, but those who came were very enthusiastic and justly so, for the Detroit players have never before given us such an excellent performance.

Mr. Lissfelt

It was an extraordinary program. At first glance it gave little promise of such a cheerful and charming evening. Old standbys like the Berlioz overture, "Roman Carnival" and the Weber "Invitation to the Dance" sounded rejuvenated, the Brahms Symphony seemed to be in frivolous company, but held its dignity even against the music of Korngold. And this suite of Korngold, incidental music to Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing," could have been written only in Vienna.

Korngold's music is the quintessence of Viennese spirit. It is not totally reactionary, has enough of modern taste, with its small orchestra, has the Elizabethan theatre in mind, and has the same freshness as his "Snowman" which attracted attention of authorities when the composer was but a boy. It is the most entertaining novelty we have heard in years, the sort of music Gabrilowitsch has often written into piano music and which he likes to play.

The second symphony is not the most appealing of Brahms' greater works, yet the director last night gave it such grace and warmth of tone, balanced it so well, and played the finale with such dignity that the least interested must have responded. Notably the violins, in the coda of the first movement, played as they never have before in our town.

Weingartner's new orchestration of the Weber waltz has a few attractive stunts—the use of the trumpets and the interplay of woodwinds—but this old tune cannot be spoiled even as piano duet. During the entire concert there were surprises from one choir to the other, and as a whole there was far more elasticity in Gabrilowitsch's directing than ever before.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Matinee
Carnegie Music Hall

PROGRAM

Overture, "Egmont" ..... Beethoven
Symphony in G Major (Military) ..... Haydn
Dance of the Blessed Spirits and Musette from Ballet Suite No. 1 ..... Gluck-Mottl
Ave Verum ..... Mozart
Moment Musical ..... Schubert
Waltz, "Tales of the Vienna Woods" ..... Strauss

Since the Pittsburgh Orchestra Association has abandoned its Saturday matinees, several of the visiting orchestras will give a "Music Lovers' Hour" Fridays the afternoon of their regular evening concerts. The Detroit Symphony Orchestra played the first of these concerts yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Music Hall under the baton of Victor Kolar, assistant director.

The program was made of the works of Viennese composers, but from the playing of the orchestra one would hardly have suspected that the players or their director had ever heard of Vienna. True, there was the Strauss Waltz, a Haydn Symphony, some Mozart. Each of those composers wrote for Vienna, but the Detroit players were heavy-footed, counted their measures well, but not for a moment heeded the advice of their clever lecturer, Edith Rhetta Tilton, to approach Haydn with a smile. "Not for a moment did they suggest that they could make as good music as they did last night.

It is a pity, however, that we cannot attract more of our public to these matinees, for they give us opportunity to hear lighter music that is too often ignored in the more serious programs.

Elizabeth Hollister Marries Paul A. Hetz

Miss Elizabeth Hollister, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Hollister, of Park street, Greensburg, became the bride of Paul A. Hetz, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hetz, of Greensburg, last night at 7 o'clock in the Church of the Most Holy Sacrament, Greensburg. The church was decorated with fall flowers, palms, ferns and crotons.

The bride wore a gown of black and Spanish silk crepe, with a matching hat, and carried a bouquet of tea roses and lilies of the valley. The sister of the bridegroom, Miss Marie Hetz, was the maid of honor, wearing green crepe and carrying pompons and roses. James Hollister served as best man.

There was a breakfast in the Hollister home, with covers laid for 20. Yellow and white was the color scheme. Mr. and Mrs. Hetz will make their home in Greensburg upon their return from a Canadian motor trip.

Whitneys to Be Hosts At Notable Race Meet

NEW YORK, Nov. 14—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney, who are at Llangollen at Upperville, Va., will be hosts Tuesday at one of the most notable race meets held there since the Civil War.

Manhattan society folk who journey to Virginia and South Carolina to spend the season at their winter homes will attend the affair. Special trains will leave from New York carrying many Long Island residents from the Meadow Brook, North Shore, Piping Rock and other fashionable sections.

The Whitneys will have a large house party at Llangollen, which Mr. Whitney gave to his bride, the former Mary Altemus, of Philadelphia, on the occasion of their marriage last September.

The estate now comprises over 1,000 acres of the finest hunting country, and the ancient colonial mansion is surrounded by huge stables, garages, a flying field and a race course for the training of the young couple's string of famous horses.

DESIGNER PRESENTS NEWEST VOGUE IN EVENING WRAPS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 14—It looks as though we are to be up to our ears in fur this season. For, as each new coat or wrap makes its attractive appearance, it seems that fur collars mount higher and higher. Several wraps have fur collars that close just under the chin, while others have collars that, at back, come almost to the top of the head. And coats and suits share in this new mode. It most certainly gives a lavish and sumptuous look and that most likely is the reason for its popularity. The new wraps are all very lovely and just now wraps of white satin or velvet with dark furs are attracting much attention and not a few envious glances. For they certainly do strike a regal note, even more so than the black wraps with white fox or ermine. It seems rather strange, after what one reads, to find so many new and sumptuous wraps and evening frocks.

IF THEY ARE SIGNS of improved times, well then, every woman will want to carry such a signboard. One sees some quite simple evening frocks, but the coats accompanying them are invariably very, very grand.

* * *

WE SHOW a sketch of a lovely wrap from the conservative but highly successful house of Mirande, whose principal designer is a clever American woman. Which is interesting, as this house caters almost entirely to wealthy Europeans. The wrap is of very heavy white satin, lavishly trimmed with silver fox. The half-tucked, half-pleated effect across the shoulders is repeated at the waistline and the lower edge of the wrap.

* * *

THE EVENING DRESS is by Worth, who has made it in a lovely soft blue chiffon velvet. The bodice is prettily draped at one side and a spray of large velvet flowers edges the decollete at the other side. A small cascade of drapery in black suggests a bustle and below it are triple tiers of flounces. This is one of the most successful of Worth's models.

Mary Adeline Wallace Marries C. N. Wayman

Mr. and Mrs. J. Elliott Wallace, of Beechview, formerly of the North Side, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary Adeline Wallace, to Charles Nelson Wayman, which was solemnized last evening at 8 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church of Beechview, with the Rev. Dr. S. J. Glass, former pastor, officiating.

The bride, who wore a gown of eggshell chiffon, was attended by Miss Sara Evans, as bridesmaid, in a gown of Cardinal blue chiffon. Charles Barnhart served as best man.

The ceremony was a simple affair, because of the recent illness of the bride's father. After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Wayman will make their home in Beechview.

Southern Club History 'Book' Recalls War Work

During the history of the Southern Club, which was portrayed by an album of living pictures yesterday, it was recalled that it was the only social club in Pittsburgh that had been organized into a Red Cross Chapter during the war. Most appropriately, Mrs. C. Perry Kiefer, who had led the club-chapter in selling nearly $1,000,000 worth of bonds in the Fifth Liberty Loan drive, was the "Greatest Mother of Them All" in the album. It was under Mrs. Kiefer's leadership, too, that the members sold $96,000 worth of thrift stamps during the last nine weeks of the war.

The history was narrated yesterday by Mrs. W. C. Allen and each president or her representative stepped from the large album pages, dressed in period. Mrs. Arthur B. Lynn wore the very dress in which she had been inaugurated. Little Frances Alford, charming daughter of the president, Mrs. Newell G. Alford, turned the pages and Janet Spaulh, at the piano, played a background of old Southern melodies.

After the history, Sigmund Spaeth's opera burlesque, "Jack and Jill," was presented by Mrs. Walter Close, Mrs. William O'Lee, Mrs. Jerry Uhl, Mrs. John Perry, Mrs. Byron Wade and Miss Spaugh, with the assistance of Mrs. Harvey S. Fouse, who substituted at the last moment for Mrs. C. C. Fitzhugh Lee, who was called south by the death of her father. Before the program, Mrs. Ralph Emmet Porter gave an exceptionally fine report on the State Federation convention, stressing its more spiritual values.

The Southern Club, by the way, has the distinction of having sprung from a men's club, the old Southern Society, now no longer in existence.

Management Committee Elected at Central 'Y'

At the annual meeting of Central Branch Y. W. C. A. last night many prominent women were elected to serve on the committee of management for a term of three years. Among them are Mrs. A. P. Burenfield, Miss Elenora E. Demmler, Mrs. William H. Duff II, Mrs. Charles Longenecker, Mrs. Dale R. Mason and Miss Jean McKinney, all of whom have been active in many branches of the association's work as members of the committee of management. New members are Mrs. Norman McLeod and Mrs. A. E. Sloan. Mrs. McLeod is the daughter of the late Mrs. John G. Holmes, whose activity and interest were responsible for the building of Central Branch.

Elected on the same ballot was the nominating committee for 1932: Mrs. Mathew Taylor, chairman; Mrs. Clinton T. Fisher, Miss Elsie Hanna, Mrs. William A. Keller and Mrs. Henry S. Scribner.

The committee of management will have its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday, with Mrs. William J. Gilmore, chairman, presiding.

PRODUCER TALKS :-: And Studio Sees Specter Of Big Shakeup :-: AMUSEMENTS :-: Critics Have Their Say About the Shows

David O. Selznick Planning To Develop Stars And Stories

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 14.

With the Pathe and R. K. O. studios in a state of jitters over the impending shakeup, David O. Selznick made what may be considered a prophetic statement when he said the two companies are very weak in directors and writers.

Mr. Selznick previously had sent Richard Dix's picture back to be rewritten and canceled a Lily Damita film entirely.

Norma Shearer

The young executive (he is only 30) has no plans for any particular type of story at Radio.

"No one can set any rules for stories," he says. "As an example, when 'The Divorcee' was produced, the wise ones said the public was going sophisticated. Along came 'Merely Mary Ann' and 'Daddy Long Legs' and these same ones reversed themselves to declare the public was tired of sophistication and wanted the homey, simple type of story.

"No one seems to take into account that both Norma Shearer and Janet Gaynor are box-office, regardless of what they happen to be in.

"I am going to pick stories that I think will appeal to audiences, independent of their type. Irving Thalberg follows this formula with great success. 'Strangers May Kiss,' 'Trader Horn' and hokum such as 'Hell Divers,' which is a great picture, certainly follow no set trend."

Selznick promises to build up the star roster, particularly in the development of new personalities. He considers Laurence Olivier and Joel McCrea as good bets. Generally, he declares, it takes from four to six pictures to build a comer into a feature name.

Asked about musicals, he said he favors the operetta type such as 'The Student Prince' and 'The Merry Widow.'

All Hollywood has its eyes on this young producer who holds the fate of many destinies in his hands. When he and his wife, the former Irene Mayer, appeared at the Academy dinner they were surrounded by well wishers.

LATEST GOSSIP

At this same dinner, Ivan Lebedeff lost a ruby setting from a ring that had been in his family for several generations. Evelyn Brent and Harry Edwards celebrate their third wedding anniversary today. They were married in Agua Caliente. . . . Joan Crawford and Doug Fairbanks, Jr., will take their vacation in Canada instead of New York. . . . Constance Lewis, Lou Wilson's youngest sister, is Connie Bennett's "stand-in" out at R. K. O.-Pathe. Stanley Cortez, brother of Ricardo, is an assistant cameraman on the same set. . . . Buddy Rogers will appear in the Ziegfeld "Follies" after he finishes at Paramount. . . . Charles Farrell is learning to fly. . . . Claudette Colbert has returned from a week's recuperation at Palm Springs. . . . Seena Owen is back in town and looking grand. . . . While Samuel Goldwyn is in Europe, his chief assistant, Arthur Hornblow, will be in New York looking for plays and his casting director, Robert McIntyre, will tour the country looking for talent.

LEW AYRES'S CAST

After much debating, it has been decided to give Lew Ayres the masculine lead in "The Impatient Maiden," formerly "The Impatient Virgin," by Donald Henderson Clark. The heroine is yet to be decided. James Whale, director of "Waterloo Bridge," will bring the story to the screen.

Jean Crawford

Once a Lady, Always an Actress

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Ruth Chatterton came into the Penn yesterday in another of those dramatic roles of hers that hints at secret sinning and spins photographic lights and shadows into an entertaining web of human emotions. Her new picture is titled "Once a Lady."

The plot takes the old Babbitt theme of nebbing in-laws who proceed to smear up the lives of the newlyweds and dresses it up into sophisticated drama.

Miss Chatterton has the role of the Russian wife of a young Englishman. She has difficulty in fitting in with the conventional atmosphere of her husband's home. She stands as a hindrance to his career.

DROPPING TEA CUPS

Neither can she get along with her husband's people. And worse, she blurts out in the drawing room that she is going to have a baby. If you don't think this is shocking, you should see those English tea cups drop from English hands.

"We are funny, we women," she says, "we don't belong to ourselves. We belong to a man maybe; to a child, to the wind or to a moment."

And, when a daughter is born to her and the years pass and she leaves her husband, she belongs to many moments, if a bureau full of jewelry is more than circumstantial evidence.

A DOOR CLOSES

But, after all she belongs to her daughter, and in gay Paris, it is she who sends her daughter into the happy future. Then, with the closing of the door, a mere physical gesture that attains a dramatic grandeur, final fadeout is reached.

A good supporting cast includes Ivor Novello, Jill Esmond and Geoffrey Kerr.

This one is one of Miss Chatterton's best. Though ever since Hollywood got hold of her, she never has been anything more than "once a lady" in character, she always is the actress! She looks like fate's kindest gift to the talking screen.

Playwriting Contest To End Monday

Monday midnight, November 16, the one-act playwriting contest of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Players will close. Those who intend to submit one-act plays are reminded that their manuscripts must be in the hands of the reading committee by that time. The best plays will be presented by the I. K. S. players in the Theresa L. Kaufmann Theater.

The I. K. S. players will present an evening of one-act plays, Sunday, November 29.

Plays, Players and By-Play

-By WILLIAM J. LEWIS-

"Tomorrow And Tomorrow" will come Monday in the calendar of the Nixon, which then will offer this Philip Barry play, produced by Gilbert Miller as the second production of the local season of the Theater Guild. A winner in New York last season, it comes with the same leading players, Zita Johann and Glenn Anders. The twice-a-week matinee days remain the same, much to your surprise, of course.

Small Timer says the old-fashioned gal who loved dearly now has a daughter who loves expensively.

Next week in the Alvin will be old home week for Paul McGrath, who is numbered among the supporters of Helen Hayes. "The Good Fairy" of the Molnar comedy, which the Professional Players will present as the second play of their series, Gilbert Miller, its producer, will act in it the first night. Gus Mr. McGrath, drama grad of Tech, was leading man of the Sharp Players longer than any other. Matinees will be held on the days invented by Messrs. Wodin and Saturn.

* * *

Small Timer says the college boy concerns himself for several years about sheepskin and pigskin so he can fit himself to provide a young woman with a sealskin some day.

The Harris begins its new week of screenings today with "Left-Over Ladies," featuring Claudia Dell and Walter Byron. Marjorie Rambeau, who has just announced her retirement as an actress because of a new husband, is in it, too. . . . Jean Harlow has been signed for a personal appearance tour of Warner theaters in the East. . . . Priscilla Dean, old-time film star, has been added to the cast of "The Law of the Sea," the players of which also include Rex Bell, Sally Blane, Ralph Ince, William Farnum and Eve Southern. . . . Clark and McCullough, who recently appeared here in "Here Goes the Bride," are planning to make another series of film shorts in Hollywood.

Small Timer says the man who "tends to his knitting" seldom has time to spin any yarns.

Night Life

Rome Vincent is master of ceremonies of the night club activities on Joe Hiller's floating cabaret, the Show Boat.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Lady With a Torch

AFTER THE SHOW the other night, the wife and I sat in one of the town's most prosperous night clubs. Several people joined us. We discussed the various things that people generally discuss in night clubs. In other words, we talked about nothing.

Against the bar in the far corner of the room stood a young girl with an extremely attractive face. There was something sad about the kid's eyes—and any time anyone looks sad, I'm interested. I nudged the gentleman next to me—a Man About Town. Incidentally, I was once a Man About Town, but marriage changed all that. I am now a Man About the House. And it's not a bad switch either. (Aside to the wife: None of your wise cracks, baby).

Where was I? Oh, yes. I nudged the Man-About-Town.

"That dame against the bar," I whispered. "The one who looks as though the world was too much for her. Yes, that one. Who is she?"

My friend nodded wisely.

"That's Norma," he asserted, giving me a different name from the one I employ here. "Just one of the kids in Earl Carroll's Vanities. You see her in plenty of joints these days. She's carrying the torch for some fiddle player."

Carrying the torch. The expression has interested me ever since I first heard it. It applies, as you know, to a man or a woman who longs for the love of someone in vain. You hear about some such case every hour on Broadway. They sing about the situation from the musical comedy stages. When a dame carries a torch for the boy she loves, the situation is very sad indeed. Not quite as sad as if she actually had the boy, of course, but sad enough.

It suddenly struck me that I had never done an actual conversation story with a lady who was longing for her man. Maybe it wouldn't turn out badly. I arose.

"Bring me over to her," I asked. "Perhaps we can get some sort of yarn out of her. It's worth trying at any rate."

A moment later I was standing beside Norma at the bar. She was very sweet to me. But it was obvious from her conversation that, as far as she was concerned, life was just a bowl of worries.

I wanted to lead her into the torch angle by degrees. But she didn't give me the opportunity. She hopped into it as soon as the introduction was completed.

"It's good to know you, Mr. Hellinger," she lied, "because Jerry spoke about you so often. You remember Jerry S——, don't you? The violin player?"

"Oh, yes," I replied, not having the slightest idea about whom she was talking. "yes, indeed. A wonderful boy, that Jerry."

She sighed heavily.

"You don't know how wonderful he is," she muttered. "Nobody knows; nobody but me. He's my man, Mr. Hellinger. He's away from me now. He thinks he loves some other girl at the moment, but he'll discover his mistake. He loves me, and I love him. He'll come back, Mr. Hellinger."

Tears were beginning to appear in Norma's eyes. I looked suspiciously at the long drink in front of her, and pushed it just a little further away. One more drink and I was afraid I wouldn't have any story.

"It's beautiful to have a love like yours," I mused. "I suppose you know you're carrying the torch?"

She shook her head in perfect agreement.

"And how I'm carrying the torch!" she exclaimed. "All I ever think about is that man. My Jerry! No matter where I go—no matter what I do—I see his face before me. On the stage, at cocktail parties, during automobile drives—I can't forget my Jerry. It's terrible."

What was this? Cocktail parties. Automobile drives. Is that the way a torch is usually carried.

"I don't quite understand," I murmured. "You mean to say that, even though your heart is breaking, you still go out on occasion?"

She handed me a perplexed look.

"Of course I do," she returned. "How else am I able to forget, even if the forgetting is only for the moment? Order me a fresh drink, will you please?

"You see, Mr. Hellinger, I have to occupy my time. I love that man so that, if I don't find a little fun for myself, I find myself bursting into tears. It's terrible."

I was beginning to grow a trifle worried. This wasn't the popular conception of the torch-carrier at all, at all. I urged her on.

"Well," I chirped, "that's all very interesting, Norma. But it's not quite clear to me. This is Saturday night. Suppose you give me an idea of what you did today in order to forget."

"All right," she said. "I'll be glad to. I don't want you to tell anyone, but I did a very naughty thing today. Even though the show had a matinee, I didn't play it. I just phoned in and said I was too sick to play.

"I really couldn't help myself. Tommy F—— asked me to see that Georgia—N. Y. U. football game with him, and I just couldn't turn him down. He's the cutest man I ever did know.

"Before I met Tommy I had lunch with Guy L—— at the Napoleon Club. I'm just crazy about Guy. He's like a big bear, really.

"After the game, Tommy drove me down to the Five o'Clock Club for dinner. Did I have laughs down there! There's nothing like good food and a lot of laughs after a football game. I enjoyed myself a lot. Order me another drink, please.

"Well, no sooner was I in the theater than I received two of the grandest phone calls I've had in a long time. One man is a Wall Street broker and he still has plenty of dough left, believe you me. I promised to go driving with him, tomorrow and we'll probably stop at Henri's for dinner. After that I guess we'll go to Harlem and see the Cotton Club show. Or maybe we'll go to Connie's new show. I always have a load of laughs in either place.

"The other call was from the man I'm with tonight. He's wandering around somewhere and I'll have you meet him when he comes back. I don't care much about him, but he is good for a lot of laughs. I guess we'll leave here soon and go to Zelli's, or the Silver Ball. Or maybe we'll go downtown to Barney's. He's such a funny fellow."

Norma had been talking with great animation. Now she stopped suddenly and shifted her sad expression into high.

"And that's how it goes, Mr. Hellinger. I know that you, of all people, will understand how I miss my Jerry. How I love him!"

I swallowed hard, shook her dainty hand and returned to my table. The Man About Town leaned close.

"Tough case, isn't it, Mark?" he said. "If you do a story on the kid, give her a break. She sure is lonesome."

Puck in Green Led a Revel Of Laughs

By GEORGE SEIBEL

When Benson's company once presented "Midsummer Night's Dream" before a rural audience in England, the villagers afterward thanked him "for the enjoyable performance, and especially "for the things you put in to please us—'cause we know the comic parts wasn't writ by Shakespeare." One was almost inclined to thank the Stratford Players at the Nixon Theater last night in the same way.

George Seibel

But the comic parts were writ by Shakespeare. And they are funnier, though repeated now for 200 years, than the forced fooler, of our expensive revues. The audience at the Nixon last night roared with laughter at the antics of Bottom the weaver, Quince the carpenter, and Flute the bellows-mender, with their fellow troupers. The lamentable tragicomedy of Pyramus and Thisbe has never been done better.

FALSTAFF TO BOTTOM

The role of Bottom was played by Roy Byford, the Falstaff of the Stratfordians; Randle Ayrton was the Quince and Bruno Barnabe the Snout. Honors were shared by Geoffrey Wilkinson as Puck, one of the most difficult parts in the Shakespearean repertory.

When Charles Kean produced "Midsummer Night's Dream" in London, in 1856, Puck was played by a roguish blonde girl of 16—afterward famous as Ellen Terry. The last famous Puck in Pittsburgh was Annie Russell, who flew about the stage assisted by wires. Wilkinson was different in being all green, even his face and wig, as if he were a true woodland sprite. And he put an airy grace, a goblin agility, into all his movements.

ALL HIGHLY POETIC

But the entire production—Mendelssohn music, moonlight in the enchanted wood, the Athenian revels—was highly poetic. Dorothy Massingham was a stately Hyppolita, Gyles Isham and Hilda Coxhead as Oberon and Titania would have convinced Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, while Miriam Leighton, with her fairy followers, breathed happy life into the loveliest poetry that Shakespeare has written. It was a great night at the Nixon.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 4.

Somebody foolishly invited the newspaper editors from all over to come out here and now we can't get rid of 'em. Vice President Curtis is still prowling around here from one studio to another—I can't tell if he wants to get in the movies, or is just trying to find a Republican.

The Japanese and the Chinese haven't officially declared war yet. All this killing and fighting is just rehearsing in case war should be declared. If you get killed now it don't count.

Yours, WILL.

Air Favorites On Warner Screen

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Besides disclosing that Phillips Lord, the Seth Parker of radio fame, is a good actor of the "rube" type, "Way Down Home," bucolic comedy drama in the Warner, introduces all of Seth's "Jonesport Folks" in a setting that keeps them all in character, and in a story that appeals especially to all the air-wave friends of Seth and Liz and Cephas and other Jonesporters.

It has comedy and drama and pathos and sentiment and tenderness and good old hokum that never fails to please. And that isn't saying anything about the singing which has made the Jonesport Folks a popular radio feature, and which is plentifully mixed into the action of "Way Down Home."

IT IS SIMPLE TALE

The story isn't much to brag about, but, on the other hand, it is a sort of relief from the sex and crook drama and unwholesome psychology that seem to have been given a more important place on the screen than they have in real life. It is a simple tale, mixing villainy and righteousness according to an old formula, and involving the efforts of Seth to straighten out things so that a young chap can marry the girl of his choice and to prevent the abduction of a boy he has raised but has forgotten to adopt legally.

OL' GRAY MARE ON JOB

The abduction takes place from an upstairs room while the Jonesport neighbors are having a singing bee downstairs. They sail into all the old vocal favorites with gusto and telling effect, while the boy's no-good father is carrying him off, presumably to be held for ransom. And then there is a thrilling chase. Not automobiles, but hoss an' buggy, and you have no idea of how much excitement the ol' gray mare can put into a race of this kind until you see it. It's the climax of a plain exposition of the life of humble, honest folks, and if you like that kind of stuff you'll like "Way Down Home."

Besides Phillips Lord, the cast of principals includes Effie Palmer as a lovable Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Lord as Liz, Frankie Darro as the boy, Frank Albertson and Bette Davis as the "young love interest," and Stanley Fields as a crackin' good villian.

Tammany Relief Begins at Home And Stays There

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

No New York City Republican has to join the Navy to be reduced.

This Tiger's town has spent seven million on relief. But only the Democrats know it.

The boys figure that charity begins at home. And stays there with the doors locked and the windows nailed.

Municipal relief has been so successful that it now rates an investigation.

If you vote the right ticket you might go to the poorhouse. But you can demand the royal suite.

The Republicans have been hanging around hoping that Tammany will shake the tablecloth out of the window.

Tammany is tough. But it ain't airtight. The G. O. P. still has the postoffice and the apple concession.

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: Thanks for everything, but I wouldn't say any more . . . Your bouquet at the ticket brokers for making deals by only a nod of the head isn't so hot . . . How about those fellers on the Stock Exchange floor who swap billions daily with only a nod of the bean to bind a deal? . . . If you notice the august Times these days, there have been fewer by-lines for the staff . . . Seems that one of the editors has four sec's, and has been allowing them to cover unimportant events, like high school basketball games on Staten Island, and letting them sign their names to one paragraph tales. One day the head man saw it and did he get mad? . . . You aren't the only guy who was kicked out of school for being a dunce . . . Ted Husing, one of the greatest radio announces, was booted out in the sixth grade for being a dope in elocution!!!

Louis Armstrong returns to town in a fortnight at Connie's . . . Did you hear his version of "Vim Till the Finish?" It's hotter than some November days in N. Y.! . . . The renowned "you can't go from Polo to Poland in one generation" quip widely credited to Arthur Caesar, was originally pulled by Marian Spitzer Thomson, who told it first as a form of criticism on Arthur . . . He admits when he arrives at a party safe, but not sound, that Marian originated it, but that he doesn't care . . . When he hears anything that he considers clever, he lifts it, so what?—he says . . . Well, I'll tell you what! . . . I think people like that oughta be forced to sit through opening performances of shows like "Here Goes the Bride" . . . Phil Baker is carrying on a terrific ro-oh-mance via telephone and telegraph wires with Ethel Barrymore Colt—that's all there izzz about the Barrymore gal—there izzzn't any etcetra.

Your Walter Huston-Nan Sutherland tip of Thursday night turned out nice, wot? . . . Did you know Mack Gordon wrote the lyrics for "Time On My Hands?" . . . That woman author is related to R. Gerardine Allen, by the way . . . If you're going crazy will you take me with you? . . . I wear a size 16 straightjacket.

The talk is that there will be no more issues of "Hullaballoo," the present edition having been printed to forestall rivals from issuing a mag with the same tag. Clever? . . . Be careful in your Spanish pronunciations—don't forget . . . Barbara Barondess is doing "Little Bo-Peep" for the M-T . . . Wayne King thanks you for everything . . . Time repudiated one of your gags in the letters-from-readers pillar recently . . . Looka who's making fun! . . . In a later issue, under the title of "Jump", it ran a para about a fellow sound asleep on a bus . . . He was dreaming, the mag says, that he was on a sinking ship and jumped out the window and got killed! . . . How does Time know what he was dreaming about if he got killed—or am I too loud? . . . It's one of the oldest psychological tests that they give to kids in the fourth grade . . . Remember your gag about the night watchman who told his boss: "I dreamed about you last night being in a plane which was wrecked and all were killed; don't go!" . . . The owner went, anyway, came back safe and fired the watchman! . . . That's another test—the question being: "Why did he fire the watchman?" The snappy retort being: "Because the dope admitted that while on duty he was asleep!"

Everett Marshall of "Scandals" will be sued for the usual trouble by his agent, H. Dagand—sounds dagand mean to me . . . J. H. the movie actor's girl, who got $20,000 of jewels from him a few weeks ago, kissed him ta-ta as he departed for N. Y. for a fortnight . . . On his return he learned she married another guy—and to make it a little more difficult—she and her new husband are dwelling in the shack next to H's . . . Rose J. Collins of White's show still feels terrible because in that col'm about all the girls in the show, you omitted her . . . I told her to give a piece of her mind to B. H., who gathered all names, ages, etc . . . Thomas Fleming called. Said he had a conversation in which he said: "There must be smart women! I married one!" and he was squelched with: "My boy, there are no smart women—but there are a lotta dumb men!"

That story Sime front-paged about one tab cutting out all gossip, etc., puzzles me, considering that plans are now going on for that tab to start a col'm, a la your Monday stuff . . . I'll use that HH story by way of Allen for your private wire next week . . . Very funny, what? . . . Thank Ben Blue, of the Irving Berlin office, for Yvette Regal. I'll set the date . . . Did you call Donald? . . . Your mother had the baby out in the park all day . . . Walda tasted her first spaghetti, liked it and calls it "Skedabee" . . . Several people, it appears, were not certain what you said Tuesday about that tip . . . Let me get it clear—do I understand that what you said was that a news service—on-a-tip—has sent a plane to a spot in Northern Canada—far beyond any railhead—where two bodies of aviators, clawed beyond recognition by bears, were found . . . The service hopes to establish the identity of the men by markings on the wrecked plane—and if it turned out to be Nungesser and Coli, a long time mystery would be solved. Right?

Get a load of this! A company has been formed headed by H. S. Phillips, former exec of the old Keith-Albee chain, who lives in Burlington, N. J. . . . They have purchased two formulas, from a famous German chemical firm at a reputed cost of $125,000—for the making of ry and Scotch whisky . . . Both are flavoring extracts that do not require distilling! . . . And can be completed in 5 days! . . . Soon as tests are finished the formulas will be peddled on the same basis as film formerly was, meaning the State Rights plan . . . Rye and Scotch that is absolutely pure at manufacturing cost of 58 cents a quart is the aim of the new concern.

Davis Screen Has Love Mixup

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Ina Claire steps forth as an interesting talk screen comedian in "Rebound," current film in the Davis. It is a version of the Donald Ogden Stewart play and it is amusement with a sparkle.

This comedy is a mixup in love if there ever was one. Bill, the great Romeo, loves Evie. And Sara loves Bill. Evie ups and marries $8,000,000 and Bill, bouncing back to earth from the shock, marries Sara, self-styled "it girl."

Then developes an epidemic of flirtations, with the married folks acting as if they should have been married to someone else.

Edward G. Griffith directed the film. The supporting cast includes Myrna Loy, Robert Ames and Robert Williams.

Mr. Williams, you know, was seen here recently in the "Platinum Blonde," and he had the town talking about him. Then came news that death gave him the final curtain in Hollywood.

Watching him on the screen yesterday we were impressed with the loss that is Hollywood's through his passing. He was a fellow that could do more with a gesture than all the old silent movie heroes put together. Just the way he drops his hat and says, "Gee, I'd like to brain him," in the current film, is a treat.

THRONGS WAIT KOMICS' SHOW TOMORROW

Thousands of Children to Attend Big Club Affair; Will Parade to Stanley

Thousands of children are looking forward to the big Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club party at the Stanley Theater tomorrow.

Children from all chapters, holding admission tickets distributed at the neighborhood theater meetings today, will assemble at the Sun-Telegraph Building near Bigelow boulevard, promptly at 2 o'clock tomorrow. There they will form in line, in charge of representatives of the Sun-Telegraph, and march to the Stanley Theater.

Each chapter will have its own banner and motion pictures will be taken on the line of march. These pictures will be shown in each of the theaters where Komic Club chapters have been organized.

The program at the Stanley will open with the singing of the national anthem, pledge of allegiance to the flag, and reading of the club pledge.

"ROSEY" TO PRESIDE

"Rosey" Rosewell will act as master of ceremonies, introducing several prominent speakers. A feature picture never before shown in Pittsburgh, comedies and news flashes of interest to children will be shown.

As the stage attraction, John H. Harris, district manager for Warner Theaters, has procured Dauntless, the famous Movie Dog. Dauntless, the dog in "Under the Black Eagle," "The Thirteenth Hour," and other big pictures, and will be put through his paces on the Stanley stage tomorrow by his owner and trainer, Scotty Wilson. Another big attraction will be Kippy, the Komic Club Clown.

REMEMBER SCHEDULE

Members will please remember the time and place of meeting. Two o'clock at the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Building, just off Bigelow boulevard. Look for your own chapter banner and stand close by it. Admission tickets distributed at the chapter meetings today must be presented at the door.

Children who have not yet enrolled in the Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club will find a coupon on the comic page of this paper. Fill it in and mail to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, and you will receive your membership card and button.

GASOLINE TAX SHOWS GAIN

Collections of the state gasoline tax have increased steadily since the responsibility for paying the tax was removed from the retailer to the distributor, June 1, and a revenue patrol of 40 state police established to check on shipments of gasoline from other states.

That considerable quantities of gasoline were trucked into the Pittsburgh area last year from Ohio without payment of tax is generally known. This traffic has been greatly reduced, it is believed, since the establishment of the border patrol which in all includes 40 picked men from the state highway patrol.

The work of the border patrol, according to Capt. W. C. Price of the state police, has been complicated by the fact that the officers must trace the shipment into the hands of the distributor and then prove that he does not pay the tax on it. The effect on collections, however, is shown by an increase of almost $1,000,000 in September collections throughout the state.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon today announced that W. G. Eckles Company, of New Castle, Pa., have been chosen as architects for the new postoffice building in that city.

The Eckles Company's contract for plans of the Grove City postoffice was transferred to W. Holmes Crosby & Co., of Oil City, City.

PENN TOWNSHIP FARMHOUSE BUILT IN 1812 ..... COLLAPSED OVER A COAL MINE

PETE GEORGE, 71; HIS HOUSEKEEPER, MRS. MAUDE H. WRIGHT, 55, AND HER GRANDSON IN THEIR "HOME" IN A BARN

OLD DWELLING, SUPPLIES LOST

A Penn Township farmer, his housekeeper and her son will be forced to live in a barn this winter, because their home has caved in, due to a coal mine blast under it.

In the old two-story stone house, built in 1812, near Mt. Hope Cemetery, near Frankstown road, Penn Township, is a stone marker which reads: "May 10, 1812. P. Stoner and Babra Stoner."

Peter George, 71, a widower, leased the building with a 42-acre farm, seven years ago. Mrs. Maude Helen Wright, 55, a widow, his housekeeper, and her son, Harry Wright, 21, made their home with him.

While Mrs. Wright was ironing in the kitchen, a few days ago, the floor cracked. She reached the back door just as the building caved in. The stove, tables, chairs and beds dropped into the coal mine, 40 feet below. All their clothes and winter's supplies fell there, too. Nothing was saved.

Mr. George is fitting up the barn to make it habitable. Neighbors have furnished a stove, cooking utensils and food.

Yuletide Spirit Reflected By Christmas Jingle 'Last Line' Contest

"Christmas Jingles" have made a hit with readers of the Sun-Telegraph. The editor of this department is swamped with answers and, happily, the majority of the "last lines" submitted breathe the Christmas spirit.

That's just what the Sun-Telegraph had in mind—the quickening of the holiday spirit, spreading it earlier, and placing the public in a frame of mind to shop more and soon—while the stores are less crowded, the stocks of holiday goods are complete and the prices are lower than ever before in pre-Christmas shopping days.

Readers are having lots of real fun with the "Christmas Jingles" and those who write what are selected as the best last lines will get some extra money to speed their Christmas shopping. Five dollars is paid for the best last line selected by the judges and $1 each for the next five best. Just take a look at "Christmas Jingle" No. 4 on this page today. Try your hand at a last line for this incomplete "Jingle." You may win some of that Christmas money.

All readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, with the exception of employes, are invited to enter the "Christmas Jingle" contest. You can send in as many last lines as you like. Equal awards will be paid to readers whose answers are tied in the judging. You do not have to buy a Sun-Telegraph to enter this contest. WIZARD CLUTCH INTRODUCED

Principles of "Wizard Control" combining three new features in the construction of the 1932 Buick eight automobile, will be demonstrated for the first time in Pittsburgh today. Said to be the greatest achievement since the self starter was installed on automobiles, the new control combines a new automatic clutch, free wheeling and a new silent second syncro-mesh transmission.

It results from the new method of car control featuring a button controlled automatic clutch.

Showrooms of the company all over the country today will show a line of 26 models, said to be the most complete line ever assembled and grouped in four series.

The 1932 car is said to be full of new features, among which is a new ride regulator, permitting adjustment of the shock absorbers to road conditions. Improvements in the starting, fuel system and vacuum pump, the latter assuring proper windshield wiper action under all driving conditions are also included.

3 CLOSED BANKS TO PAY CITY $882,500

Receivers Assure Kerr That Checks Will Be Mailed on Monday; 3 More Waited

Controller James P. Kerr announced today that Monday the receivers of three closed Pittsburgh banks will send the city checks totaling $882,500, representing city deposits in those institutions when they closed.

Three other institutions holding city funds amounting to $141,500 will first consult the State Department of Banking, before sending checks, Controller Kerr said. In addition, the city holds bonds securing city deposits in two other banks amounting to $37,700. The city will keep these bonds until such time as it is advantageous to sell them, according to Controller Kerr. The Controller and City Treasurer R. W. Thompson yesterday visited eight institutions.

The banks to make payment on Monday, and the amounts, include the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., $690.00; Monongahela National Bank, $110,000, and the Pittsburgh American Bank and Trust Company, $82,500.

The city has on deposit $77,500 in the Highland National Bank, $44,000 in the Home peoples Bank and $20,000 in the Merchants Savings and Trust Company. The receivers of these banks will consult the state before making payment, it was stated.

DOLL LADY

Is GIVING Away This Year

Read Today's Message:

Dear Little Girls:

I am beginning to see daylight. I am gradually but surely getting out from under that deluge of letters you have been sending to me during the last week. And I am glad to say that nearly every little girl who has asked me about my marvelous new dolly "Honeybunch"—will have a letter from me before Monday. In fact, many are getting their letters today.

This Is "Honeybunch"—Isn't She Lovely and Adorable?

I want to tell you that I am mighty proud of the glorious big doll I have brought to Pittsburgh for distribution this year. Of course it would be mighty hard to bring a better doll than last year's "Tickletoes," but "Honeybunch" is equally as good and is truly just as beautiful. She is one of those great big dolls that make you fall in love with her at the first glance.

You can see by the picture that "Honeybunch" is not only beautiful but she is also gorgeously dressed—a real aristocrat of the doll world. There's nothing cheap or trashy about "Honeybunch." She is made to last a long time, and, by the way, she is also made exclusively for the little girls who write to me. "Honeybunch" is not for sale in any store. If she was, she'd cost a lot of money. Here are the names of some of the little girls who have written to me this week: Margaret McCredie, Joy Ann South, Gloria Francis Lergi, Jean Boschette, Shirley Shapiro Verna McIntosh, Ruby Adams, Marie Laura Constance, Helen Dietz, Patsy Mae Brown, Betty Patton, Nellie Croyle, Alberta Thornton and Margaret Bauer.

"Honeybunch" is unbreakable, she's about as tall as this newspaper is long, she has rubber arms and hands, eyes that twinkle and roll from side to side. She can go to sleep, has b-e-a-u-t-i-f-u-l organdy clothes, a lace cap with ribbon bows and shoes and stockings to match. You can make her walk like a real live baby, she has a charming voice, sucks her pacifier, bends her arms and legs—in fact "Honeybunch" does lots of really cute things. Oh, by the way, I almost forgot to tell you that she's almost a twin of "Tickletoes"—she's "Tickletoes' " first cousin. And she's going to be very easy to get.

If you really want a "Honeybunch" all for yourself before Christmas, and will promise to do the simple things I'll ask you to do, send me the coupon in this announcement with your name and address and I'll tell you how you can get this big wonder doll before the holidays.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

TRUSTS FACE PROBLEM IN STOCKS

Managers Confronted With Puzzle of Buying Now or Possibly 'Missing Market'

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—General management investment trusts which had funds available for investment in the market have been puzzled for the past month as to what action they should take. At intervals during the market decline they had acquired moderate amounts of stocks only to find their temporary advantages destroyed by further recessions.

Early this year some managements practically decided as a policy to refrain from further commitments, except under special conditions, until it was clearly established that the situation had changed. With the arrival of summer some attempts were made to feel for the bottom, but the results proved rather discouraging, so that there was less disposition to invest additional funds at the October lows.

TWO YEARS' DECLINE

The subsequent market recovery has caused various managing groups great concern as to the position they should take. On the one hand there was the story of the past two years, when each rally was followed by a new plunge downward. On the other there was the realization that securities had been declining for two years and that a bottom would be reached some time that varied forces were working constructively, that favorable developments were taking place at home and abroad.

An extremely cautious attitude had been developed among trust managers but for a month they have been torn between conflicting emotions, the fear of further buying before the decline was completed and the fear of missing the market.

BUYING SITUATION

Investment trust heads have expressed opinion that these conditions were as trying as anything the trusts had come through, that to miss the turn in the market would be almost as disastrous as were the experiences of buying on the rally early this year.

Some trusts began buying in the late summer in rather restricted fashion but their purchases near the lows of October were less in volume than their earlier purchases because the velocity of the decline affected their confidence in their judgement. There was little following up of the advance, but one trust executive expresses the opinion that the next setback in stocks will be the time for buying in decisive fashion.

FAVORS WORLD OIL CONFAB

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—One of the first official acts of Amos L. Beaty in his new capacity as president of the American Petroleum Institute was to cable the Association of Rumanian Petroleum Industrialists, in reply to the latter's recent proposals from Paris, that the institute believes benefit might result from a world conference of oil producers.

Such a conference would be limited to an exchange of views of the world-wide economic situation and of the supply and demand factors, in order to give producers of every country the opportunity, in conformity with their own laws, individually to regulate their operations in the most intelligent manner.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Close Heavy — Local Stocks Recede

MARKET AGAIN DRAGGED OFF BY RAILS

List Recovers Slightly at End, but Many Shares Show Losses of 1 to 4 Points

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—The stock market experienced another setback today, but managed to recover a little in the late trading, as better support appeared in the wheat market.

Rails again dragged the list down and Radio and Keith broke about a point to new lows, reflecting indications of a stockholders' controversy over the proposed reorganization of Radio Keith.

Net losses in shares ranged from 1 to 4 points in many issues at the finish, but final prices were generally from fractions to a point above the lowest of the morning. The closing tone was heavy. The turnover for the short session was around a million shares.

Selling of the rails apparently reflected further discussion of the prospect of dividend reductions and fears that relief from the proposed rate increases and wage reductions would be deferred.

Wall street's reaction to President Hoover's suggestion of a system of mortgage discount banks were generally favorable, but it had little influence on the share market.

Shares closing about 2 to 4 points lower included New York Central, which again penetrated new low ground; New Haven, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Norfolk and Western, American Telephone, Du Pont and Coca Cola. United States Steel lost a point.

The coppers were again an isolated firm spot.

The week-end estimates of operating schedules in the Youngstown steel area was again encouraging, indicating that next week's operations will be around 40 per cent of capacity, against 37 this week.

Bar silver was about steady.

In foreign exchanges, strength of the Argentine peso was a feature.

WHEAT PRICES SHOW DECLINES

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—General pressure to sell and relative dearth of buyers led to early new downturns of wheat prices today. Much of the selling was of a stop loss character. Rains in domestic winter wheat territory southwest had a bearish influence. Opening ¼ to 1⅜ cents lower wheat afterward held near the initial range. Corn started unchanged to ¼ cent higher but later sagged all around.

Liverpool reports that Russian spot wheat was again a weight on the market put bulls under a handicap. Word, however, that rains in Kansas west of Pratt were only scattered and light tended to stimulate buying after wheat had touched as low as 10¼ cents under its recent high point. Rallies ensued, but for the time being were fractional.

PLAN PAPER MILL MERGER

MONTREAL, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Negotiations for a consolidation of the largest newsprint paper mills in Canada were under way here today.

If they are successful, the united organization would have an annual capacity of approximately 2,000,000 tons—or about half of the annual consumption of newsprint on the American continent.

The companies represented in the negotiations are: Minnesota and Ontario Paper Company, Canadian International Paper Company, Abitibi Power and Paper Corporation, Consolidation Paper Corporation, St. Lawrence Paper Corporation and Price Brothers.

A. R. Graustein, New York power magnate and president of the International Paper and Power as well as of Canadian International Paper, was among those participating in the conference.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

DAM BUILDERS PLACE TRUCK ORDER

International Harvester Gets Contract for Fleet From Six Companies, Inc.

The Six Companies, Inc., designated by the United States government to build the great Hoover Dam under a bid of $48,890,999, recently placed an order for 50 International Harvester motor trucks. This big engineering organization, which is a combination of six leading western contractors is to use this fleet of Internationals to bear much of the very heavy hauling responsibilities in its contract.

Millions of yards of material must be moved by these trucks under conditions that old-time construction men now on the job say are the hardest they have ever encountered. Sleep places do tense summer heat that in the canyon frequently hovers around 120 degrees continually rocks going and a steady grind that must go on night and day will test these trucks to the extreme. Internationals already on the job are operating on most rigid schedules.

Service of a very comprehensive type helps to keep these trucks continually and effectively on the go. At the shovels a spare truck is frequently put at work while the truck replaced is given a thorough check and all necessary greasing, adjusting and minor repairing done. A fully-equipped service shop has also been established in Boulder City where the heavier work is performed.

Hoover Dam will fill the gigantic chasm of the Colorado River to a height of about 730 feet above the foundation rock. It will be one-eighth of a mile thick at the base will contain about 3,400,000 cubic yards of concrete and will impound 30,500,000 acre-feet of water in an area vastly greater than Gatun Lake at the Panama Canal. It will be higher than any dam now existing and the construction will require 5,500,000 barrels of cement and nearly 60,000 tons of steel. The surface of the river will be raised 582 feet, creating the largest artificial lake in the world with an area of 145,000 acres or 227 square miles. Six to seven years will be required to complete the project.

BUSINESS INDEX STATIONARY

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—After increasing swiftly in speculative activity in commodity and security markets, evidences of actual increase in industrial and trade activity so far in November are still fairly scattered and of uncertain significance, says the Business Week in its weekly summary. Despite undeniable improvement in operating results and more optimistic business attitudes, the unmistakable prospect must immediate evidence of upturn at the season of the year.

Its instance to seasonal decline of steel production fairly well sustained strength in residential building and carloadings an October upturn in department store sales, sculptured increases in employment, and some recession in currency circulation after allowance for seasonal and price factors are all encouraging indications offset by persistent weakness in electric power output and check payments and continued bank credit liquidation. The business index for the first week of November is stationary at the low level for the year.

Return of Reserve Credit Favorable Sign

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THREE SUCCESSIVE WEEKLY decreases in the amount of Federal Reserve credit in use are being interpreted as an indication that the maximum strain on the country's banking system has passed and that abnormal conditions due to hoarding of money and other unusual factors are on the wane.

The fact that the flow of gold away from this country has come to an end adds another item to the favorable developments in the credit situation. The statements show that the Federal Reserve Banks have not been active in either buying or selling government securities. This makes the decline in the use of reserve credit even more impressive since it has not been subject to artificial influence.

The last three weekly Federal Reserve statements indicate a total decline in reserve credit of $174,000,000. At the close of business on November 11 total credit in use was $2,064,000,000. This was $45,000,000 less than in the preceding week. The previous statement showed a drop of $102,000,000 and the week ended October 28 recorded a decline of $27,000,000.

Credit Increased

DURING MOST OF THE PAST summer reserve credit in use expanded rapidly. Lack of confidence in banks was responsible for hoarding of money and unusual demands made it necessary for banks to keep themselves in an exceptionally liquid state.

In order to help the situation, the Federal Reserve Banks made a practice of buying United States government securities in order to increase the amount of money in circulation. A month ago when foreign countries were taking their gold out of the United States, the possible effect was regarded with some apprehension since the basis on which Reserve credit stands was being reduced at a time when the amount of credit in use was expanding.

The change in the state of affairs during the past two weeks has removed fears of this nature. Falling reserve credit and moderate increases in gold holdings have combined to improve the position and to increase the unused resources of the Reserve system.

Gold Movement Changed

WHILE GOLD WAS LEAVING this country three weeks ago, there has been a reversal in the movement since that time. In the week ended October 28 the Federal Reserve System lost $19,000,000 in gold, but it regained $24,000,000 in the following week and $35,000,000 in the week ended November 11.

The reductions in Federal Reserve credit outstanding during the past three weeks have largely been accounted for in declines in the rediscounting activities of banks and reductions in the purchases of bills in the open market by the Federal Reserve Banks.

During this period the Reserve Banks have not been active on either the buying or selling side of United States government securities, but when they feel that the large amount of credit now outstanding is no longer needed they can voluntarily bring about a further reduction in credit in use by selling a portion of their holdings of securities which amounted to $727,000,000 when the last statement was made.

FRESH EFFORTS HELD NEEDED IN TRADE

Time Believed Ripe for Redoubling Advertising, Merchandising Energy

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Business has reached a phase of the cycle where redoubled merchandising, advertising and sales energy may well prove effective in lifting trade above the dead center.

In touch with miscellaneous groups of manufacturers who buy raw material from him, Charles R. Hook, president of the American Rolling Mill Company, at Middleton, O., told me:

Mr. Rukeyser

"During the past few weeks we have noted a most encouraging sign; that is, a great deal of activity in preparing for the manufacture of more attractive products for less money and new programs for merchandising products.

UPTURN SEEN

"We maintain close contact with the manufacturing departments of many of our customers and also co-operate through our sales development and publicity departments in our customers' merchandising problems. Thus we have an opportunity to learn first-hand of the developments going on in many lines of trade.

"The combined forces resulting from the aggressive planning of industry in general, together with a growing confidence on the part of the public, should now cause business to show a gradual improvement."

AT LOW EBB

In giving the background for his information, Mr. Hook revealed:

"Our business is entirely dependent upon other industries which use our products in the manufacture of various articles. We supply iron and steel sheets to a great many different manufacturers who furnish the necessities and luxuries of life, such as the refrigerator, stove, automobile, washing machine, radio, electrical, steel furniture, building and numerous others.

"With two or three exceptions, these various industries have been operating at a very low ebb for the last year or more."

PESSIMISM DISRUPTED

Bernard M. Baruch is one of the outstanding financiers of the country who has gone through the last two years without diminishing his prestige. The country accordingly listened attentively to his sage Armistice Day remarks, and seemed to remember that when others were fallaciously arguing that business was basically sound two years ago, Mr. Baruch was abstaining from misleading ballyhoo. Concerning the outlook, the former head of the War Industries Board said:

"I am not making any predictions, but of one thing I am certain: That we have disrupted the continuity of pessimism."

STEEL INGOT PRODUCTION UNCHANGED

Favorable Augury Seen in Recent Gain in Output; Prices Continue Firm

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel ingot production this week showed no change from last week's rate of about 29 per cent, when there had been three points increase in two weeks from the low rate of the year. November is going at a pace promising to make it the highest month since August, official reports having shown 28.02 per cent for September and 27.76 per cent for October, the insignificant drop for October being apparently a prelude to the increase since seen. July, August and September had each shown a little more than three points drop.

While the recent gain is a favorable augury for the future it is not of the most substantial character possible, being confined largely to a few lines of consumption, many consumers not doing any better than formerly. Increases have been chiefly in rails and in steel for the automotiles and farm implement, with certain increases in structural steel apparently only temporary, for fabricated structural steel in general has been losing ground lately.

CONDITIONS IMPROVE

Production could slip a little next month and still leave October as the low month of the year, while frequently October has been the high month of the second half. The year's total ingot production would then be all of 25,000,000 tons, against nearly 40,000,000 tons last year and nearly 55,000,000 tons in the record year, 1929.

Improved underlying conditions believed to have developed lately, financial and otherwise, could not be expected to have much favorable influence on steel demand in the last two months of a year, but would accentuate the sharp improvement that always marks the first three months of a new year. Production last March was 51 per cent over that of the preceding December.

MOTOR CALL SLOWER

Finished steel prices continue to hold rigidly, and sellers are not particularly concerned, seeing little possibility of accidents. In some lines asking prices may be marked up for first quarter, chiefly to drive in tonnage at current prices and with an eye to enforcing the prices for second quarter should tonnage increase as expected. A substantial increase in tonnage would do the mills much more good than an advance in prices, recent tonnage being too small to cover running expenses and depreciation at almost any prices.

Automobile makers are much slower to get into production on new models than was expected a couple months ago and it is suspected some are jockeying for position on a theory that it is better to come before the public last than first with a new model, at a time of year when actual purchases would not be heavy. Reports of mechanical delays may be camouflage.

Fertilizer Costs Will Be Reduced

ATLANTA, Nov. 14.—The National Fertilizer Association, which has just closed its annual convention, has decided upon fertilizer prices to the farmer for next year. Lower costs will be made possible by eliminating a number of brands, thus reducing factory overhead costs.

By JAMES J. LONG

Peak Month for Pitt.

JOCK LOSES ONLY TWICE IN NOVEMBER

ONE REASON FOR the confidence of local football fans that the Panthers would give a good account of themselves today in their first meeting with the Army was the rare record held by Coach Jock Sutherland for developing powerful teams in November. The Pitt gridders may wobble a little in the early stages of some seasons, but by the time November arrives, as a general rule, they're pretty nearly a perfect machine. It usually takes a great team to beat them in this month.

Dr. J. B. Sutherland

Sutherland's record for the entire period of his almost eight seasons of coaching at Pitt is one that gives him a ranking among the most successful pigskin tutors in the country. Out of 72 games played by his Panther teams up to this afternoon from the time he succeeded Pop Warner here in 1924, only 13 were lost, against 53 victories and six ties. But it's the November showing that stands out with particular impressiveness. Only twice in 26 games in Jock's eight campaigns were the Panthers defeated during that part of the season.

PITT LOST TWO additional games at later stages, in California post-season engagements, but during the Sutherland regime the only November defeats were a 10-to-0 reverse at the hands of W. & J. in 1924, and a 16-to-7 beating administered by Ohio State last year. Against the two defeats, Sutherland's team won 19 games in November and tied five.

Seven November games were won from Penn State, three each from Carnegie Tech and W. & J., and one each from Penn, Syracuse, Ohio State, Nebraska, West Virginia and Geneva. W. & J. and Nebraska were tied twice each and Syracuse once. The record spells great football at the stage when the going is always toughest. It meant that the Army would encounter today a school and a coach unsurpassed in the whole country for November form.

PITT IS NOT the first team representing this city to play the Army in football. That distinction belongs to Carnegie Tech, the Tartans having tangled with the Cadets on the gridiron 14 years ago. The game was played at West Point on September 29, 1917.

Carnegie was to have opened with Yale that year and Army was to have started with Holy Cross, but a revision of schedules on account of the war gave the Skibos the opening to play at West Point. The Plaid had little material, only Capt. McFeaters at tackle remaining over from the 1916 team, and Elmer Oliphant ran wild to lead Army to an easy victory, 28 to 0.

STRETCHING BEHIND CARNEGIE as the Tartans invaded Philadelphia for their tilt with Temple there this afternoon was one of the leanest records in Plaid football history for a string of a dozen contests. The Schenley Parkers had lost seven of their last 12 games. In their final five events of 1930, they defeated only Western Reserve, Temple and W. & J., while losing to Notre Dame, New York U. and Pitt. And in their first six engagements this year they beat only Buffalo and Georgia Tech while dropping decisions to W. & J., Purdue, Notre Dame and Pitt.*

Judge W. P. Steffen

FOOTBALL WON'T BE like the same old game in Pittsburgh without Wally Steffen. Eighteen years of service as coach at Carnegie Tech had made the Chicago judge a part of the sport itself hereabouts, and his decision to quit means a loss not only to the Tartan but to all of this region.

At that the Scots won't be hit as hard as would be the case if Steffen had been giving his whole attention to the coaching job. His duties as a Superior Court jurist in Chicago have permitted him to come here only at intervals, and the bulk of the coaching work has fallen upon the capable shoulders of Bob Waddell. With both Waddell and Howard Harpster available, Carnegie is in a position to fill the vacancy at once in most acceptable fashion.

THOUGH HE NEVER had an undefeated season at the local school—in fact 1915 and 1928 were the only years in which the Plaid did not lose more than one game—Steffen's record here has been a good one on the whole. Up to today it showed 84 victories, 49 defeats and seven ties.

Wally will be missed locally, whether he gives up the game altogether or takes the place of Alonzo Stagg as coach of his alma mater, Chicago, where he was all-America quarterback in 1908 after rivaling Tad Jones for the honor in 1907.

ONLY THREE COACHES in the country have served longer at one school than Steffen served at Carnegie. They are Stagg, completing his fortieth season at Chicago; Bob Zuppke, at Illinois, and Dan McGugin, at Vanderbilt. Pop Warner, Gil Dobie and others coached longer than Steffen, but not in one spot. Wally has seen many of them come and go since he took hold at Carnegie in 1914. Jess Harper was then coaching at Notre Dame, to which he returned this fall as athletic director; Dobie was at Washington, Warner at Carlisle, Joe Duff at Pitt, Bob Folwell at W. & J., Maj. Charles Daly at Army, Tad Jones at Phillips Exeter, Frank Hinkey at Yale, Fielding Yost at Michigan, Bill Hollenback at Penn State, Andy Smith at Purdue before going to California, John Heisman at Georgia Tech, Jack Wilce at Ohio State, Dr. H. L. Williams at Minnesota, Jess Hawley at Iowa State, George Brooke at Penn, Wilmer Crowell at Lafayette, Al Sharpe at Cornell, Dan Bible at Mississippi and Skip Wymard at Fordham.*

SOME UNDEFEATED TEAMS that faced hard fights today to keep their records clean were Temple against Carnegie Tech, Syracuse against Colgate, Cornell against Dartmouth, Harvard against Holy Cross, Fordham against New York U., Bucknell against W. & J. and Tennessee against Vanderbilt.

Down in Athens, Ga., something had to fall with two unbeaten elevens, Georgia and Tulane, coming together. Georgia was the last team to defeat Tulane in 1928 before Tulane started the long drive in which it has won 29 straight games.

Tommy Loughran

WITH A NEW world high-run record to his credit and holding a lead that practically assures his recovery of the 18.1 balkline championship from Welker Cochran here, Willie Hoppe must be ranked with Sportdom's greatest comebacks.

It may be difficult for the other cue stars to keep Willie from going on to the 18.2 title also, and regaining the recognition position he held for so many years as the king of all billiardists.

IN WINNING THE decision over Paulino Uscudun in their 10-round bout in New York last night, Tommy Loughran hung up his twelfth consecutive victory. He has beaten Jack Gross twice, Davie Maier, Joe Sekyra, Max Baer, Ernie Schaaf, Victorio Campolo, Johnny Risko, Tuffy Griffiths, King Levinsky, Dick Daniels and now Paulino. This ought to be plenty of evidence that he is entitled to another shot at somebody in the heavyweight championship circle. No fighter ever qualified more convincingly for a new chance at the big stuff.*

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14. — A capacity crowd of 30,000 was indicated as Carnegie Tech and Temple prepared to square off in Temple's beautiful stadium here today. Despite the fact that Georgia Tech is playing Penn at Franklin Field, local fans recall the thrilling battle that the Tartans and the Owls put up in last year's charity game, and a heavy advance sale was reported.

The teams staged a great struggle last year, which Carnegie captured, 32 to 13, after coming from behind, but most of the boys who starred here for the Skibos last year have graduated, and Temple keenly anticipates revenge for the 1930 setback.

ARMENTROUT TO START

On the other hand, Carnegie, having fought gloriously but vainly against Purdue, Notre Dame and Pitt, is desperately determined to ring up her third triumph of the current campaign.

Twenty-seven players made the trip here, but only 26 will be available for the game, since Clyde Heinzer, right guard, is definitely out of it. He won't be in a suit.

Working out yesterday afternoon on today's battleground, Capt. Armentrout went through his paces with no apparent ill effects, and is expected to start at his left halfback post.

Buck Ewing gets the fullback assignment, with Kebe at right guard, and Dueger at quarterback. Temple may start hostilities without Corny Bonner, its great fullback, and Capt. Bannack, a guard.

The home team will boast a big advantage in weight in the line, with the backfields well-matched in avoirdupois, although the Tartans have no back to match Johnson, Temple's ace, in speed nd shiftiness.

GEORGIA TECH SET

Pennsylvania and Georgia Tech took light workouts in preparation for their encounter on Franklin Field.

Penn was still minus Capt. Paul Riblett, Colehower and Burnett, while the Georgia squad was intact. None of the Penn trio is expected to see action. Coach Bill Alexander, of Tech, asserted his men were in the best shape of the year.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: MELTS COPPER, BUT WON'T BURN PAPER—After a charge of paper-insulated copper wire is melted down in an electric arc furnace at a temperature of 2,500 degrees Fahrenheit, the charred paper has to be skimmed off the surface before the molten metal can be poured. A perfect reducing atmosphere is maintained in the chamber in order to prevent oxidation of the copper, and the lack of oxygen has the incidental effect of preventing the combustion of the carbon in the paper.

Reider, who took the ball out of the air on the 29-yard stripe and stepped to the 33.

Heller failed to gain at Army's left end. Reider squirmed through left tackle for three yards. Suarez nailed him. Collins kicked far down the field to Stecker, who was run out of bounds by Milligan on the Army 31-yard line.

Hogan, Pitt quarterback, was injured on the play and his place was taken by Rocco Cutri.

Stecker was stopped by Collins and Curti at right tackle. Brown punted to Reider on the Pitt 29-yard line and he was tackled by Summerfelt as he caught the ball.

Reider rammed left tackle for seven yards. Heller ran around right end for three yards and a first down on the Pitt 39. Reider slashed off left tackle for a yard and a half. Luch banged off left guard for a yard. Cutri was piled up at right guard for a two-yard loss. Collins punted to Stecker, who fumbled on his own 30-yard line, the ball being recovered by Daugherty. Hirshberg's ferocious tackle jarred the ball out of Stecker's grasp. The officials ruled the ball had rolled out of bounds before recovered by the Pitt man and the catcher retained possession on his own 30-yard line.

PITT FAVORED

Pitt is the favorite in today's struggle, not by any great margin, for the eleven does not breathe that is a sure shot against the Kay-dets, but the Panthers, with all they've shown so far, against Notre Dame for example, certainly figure to outscore Maj. Sasse's charges.

Army has been beaten by Harvard and has been tie by Yale. Such a record, almost, is an indictment in itself, for neither Harvard nor Yale are rated very highly hereabouts.

Army probably should have beaten Harvard, the Cadets ran up a 13-0 lead and let it go at that. Harvard, however, failed to crack, and with Barry Wood tossing passes to all four or five wards and directing the play of his Crimsons like a Carideo, the Harvards won by a single, but good-as-gold, point. Against Yale, Army gained only a tie, and the Eli have been trimmed by Georgia and have been held even by Dartmouth.

MAY USE AIR ATTACK

There is no secret about Army's hopes today. The Cadets have had their running attack held in check by Yale and by Harvard, elevens not considered to be as potent on the defense as Pitt. Pitt kept Notre Dame in check, the downfall before the Irish coming primarily through the air. Therefore, Army realizing the strength of the Panther line on the defense, plans to win by utilizing its aerial game, with Raj Stecker figuring most prominently therein.

At the same time the Panthers, sporting a formidable attack themselves, with halfbacks of the

STEFFEN ASKED TO RECONSIDER

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—Judge Walter Steffen, advisory coach at Carnegie Tech, who on Thursday announced that he would sever his connections with Tech football at the close of the present season, was greeted by Clarence Overend, graduate manager of athletics at Carnegie, when he arrived here at 6 o'clock this morning to direct the Tartans in their game with the Temple eleven here this afternoon.

Steffen and Overend immediately went into a conference, and they still were holding a discussion behind locked doors four hours later. It was understood that Overend was pleading with Steffen to reconsider and remain at Tech.

A special meeting of the Tech athletic council will be held in Pittsburgh Monday night, at which time pressure will be brought to bear to have Steffen remain as advisory coach of the Tartans.

When he arrived here this morning Steffen said that he did not plan to establish football connections with any other college or university, and that his decision to quit was influenced only by a desire to get out of the game.

TULANE MEETS GEORGIA

ATLANTA, Nov. 14. — (AP.)—The spotlight of national attention today swings from the big towns to the red clay mills, where the powerful, undefeated teams of Georgia and Tulane stake their southern and national championship aspirations in Dixie's big game of the year.

Not since Georgia's famous dream and wonder team of 1927 galloped unbeaten into Atlanta, only to go slithering down to defeat in the mud before Georgia Tech, has any all-Southern battle so keenly stirred the gridiron pulses of this sector as the affair at Athens.

SPRINGDALE WINS

The Springdale Five, victors in the Allegheny Valley League last season, defeated the Trinity Cathedral Royals night, 28 to 22, in a practice tilt at Trinity last night.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Pittsburgh took on a decidedly military air today for its first Army football game as it gazed upon the marching cadets from West Point in the downtown streets during the morning and prepared for a drilling spectacle before the Army's battle with Pitt at the Stadium in the afternoon . . . It is "Der Tag" in the local football realm, the biggest gridiron day Pa Pitt's village ever has known.

Prior to today, the appearance of great Notre Dame teams have marked the high spots in the city's football history . . . Those Notre Dame teams meant more in a strictly football way than Army's does today, but the spectacle accompanying today's fracas makes it a standout . . . There is something about an Army uniform and marching feet and martial music that grips the heart . . . It takes us back to the stirring days of wartimes and heroics that are expressed only in superlatives.

It is human to want to be where the crowd is . . . That's why every man, woman and child who can arrange to be on hand will be seated in the Stadium this afternoon, waiting in keen expectancy for the thrill of a lifetime . . . It will be something to talk about in the years ahead . . . Other great football games and days may come and go, but it will be something to be able to say that you were there when Army and its Cadet Corps made history at the Stadium.

A sign of the times may be found in the fact that Carnegie Tech and Temple, meeting in Philadelphia today, have reduced the prices of seats for their game . . . It is too late in the present season, with tickets printed well in advance, to expect the movement to become general this fall, but next year likely to find a general slashing in the prices of the pasteboards, on the practical theory that it is much better to fill up the stadia everywhere at popular prices within the reach of the public than to keep them up and play to thousands of empty seats . . . Carnegie Tech, playing its heart out in game after game with a small squad and a tough schedule this year, will be lucky to break even financially, while Duquesne University will lose money and Pitt will be glad to come out on the right side of the ledger, considering the great overhead of the Stadium . . . All of them would have been much better off playing to crowded stands at smaller prices throughout the season and giving the public a break and educating fans for the future.

Consider the prices for the major games . . . The Army game today calls for $4 and $5 per seat, with a limited number of $3 tickets available . . . The average man can take his entire family downtown to see a good moving picture show and treat them to a meal for what it would cost him for a couple of tickets for a football game. That is one of the reasons the football gates have not been up to expectations. The prices must be adjusted to fit the times for the mutual benefit of everybody.

Right now a committee of local men is working with the three local colleges trying to arrange a football game or set of games to be played at the Stadium or Forbes Field on Saturday, December 5, for the benefit of the unemployed . . . Many obstacles will have to be overcome, but something will be done, and the presentation will be offered at popular prices . . . If the attraction is worthwhile a substantial sum will be raised, for every ounce of support that can be mustered will be put behind the venture to insure its success . . . The cause is a worthy one and deserves the wholehearted the bulk of the spectators were certain to be seated in time for the pageant of the corps.

At 1:05, the Pitt band appeared from the tunnel at the south end of the Stadium, headed by a strutting drum major and to the accompaniment of a roar from the huddled onlookers, paraded down the already soggy greensward, turned under the north goal posts and then finished its playing in front of its box near the 50-yard line. The famous Pitt panther accompanied the musicians and went through his customary gyrations. The Pitt band hugriedly went to its seats to clear the stage for the coming of the Army.

PRESS BOXES PACKED

In the press boxes typewriters were clicking and telegraph instruments were clicking paragraphs to newspapers far and wide across the land. New York and Chicago papers were represented by special correspondents and the facilities were tested to the limit.

At 1:10 the officials for the game entered along the sidelines and the Pitt cheer leaders rushed out and began to whoop things up in the cheering section.

The Army cheer leaders also were out awaiting their duties, which would not begin until after the cadets were seated.

"Hail to Pitt" blared the Pitt band, with the students joining in the "Allegheny-Ghenae, Ghenae."

All eyes were trained on the tunnel at the south end of the bowl, watchfully waiting for the first sign of the coming corps, the feature to many of the gathered assemblage, of the entire afternoon.

STANDS PACKED

By this time the stands were jammed except for sections in both ends. The rain had settled down to a steady drizzle.

It was estimated that the attendance would be 65,000.

CHARITY GRID TILTS TODAY

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 14. —(AP.)—Charity will be the goal of the West Liberty-Morris Harvey football contest here today. Morris Harvey authorities have announced that the proceeds, after the West Liberty guarantee has been paid, will be handed over to the Huntington community chest. Both squads enter the contest with good records.

Morris Harvey has lost only two from seven games this year. West Liberty, having lost only one and tied one, boasts the country's highest-scoring ball carrier of the year, Bob Campiglio. An evenly-matched tilt is foreseen by both teams.

MILITARY TILT AT STAKE

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—St. John's Military Academy, of Delafield, Wis., and Culver Military Academy, of Culver, Ind., will meet at Soldier Field here today before an expected crowd of 50,000 for the military school football championship of the Middle West. Profits realized will go to charity.

An imposing list of honor guests, including Secretary of the Navy Charles F. Adams, will be in the official boxes.

Gelbert and Bride Here for Grid Game

Charley Gelbert, brilliant shortstop of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, accompanied by his bride, were in Pittsburgh today for the purpose of attending the Pitt-Army game at the Stadium.

Charley spent some of his boyhood years in Pittsburgh, the family being a resident of the Shady Side district. Gelbert's father, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, was a star of the old D. C. and A. C. eleven after he had starred at Penn.

ALLEGHENY OUT TO KEEP SLATE UNMARRED

Yellow Jacket Skaters Invade Cleveland For Second Battle Tonight

GENEVA ELEVEN AIMS TO WIN AT MEADVILLE

Whether Western Pennsylvania college football will have an undefeated team this season depends a great deal on the Allegheny-Geneva game to be played at Meadville today.

If the Gators can get past Geneva, they have a very good chance of ending the season with nothing more than a tie staining their record. But if Geneva plays the brand of football they used against Waynesburg last week in spoiling the Yellow Jacket undefeated record, Allegheny must produce the best they have to win.

Waynesburg, undefeated until last week, when it lost to Geneva, will test the strength of the teacher college by taking on Slippery Rock, one of the strongest of the group at Slippery Rock. Westminster encounters another in meeting Edinboro at New Wilmington.

Grove City goes into West Virginia to play Bethany.

Washington and Jefferson encounters a strong Bucknell team at Lewisburg which should tell whether the Presidents are able to come back from the slump in which the Washington team has been for the past few weeks.

the entrance of the cadets, a hubbub of voices drifted up to the press box. All eyes expectant.

Whence the Pitt band blared forth again to fill in the delay.

At 1:18 a shout heralded the approach of the corps. Massed behind their military band, they came stepping out from the south end tunnel, turning under the goal post and moving down the right side-line. Wearing their gray traveling uniforms with long coats and peaked caps, the future generals came parading like the best drilled men they are said to be. Straight and true they swung along as the fans cheered their appreciation. More than 1,200 of them there were as they continued down to the far end zone and then followed the band across to the other side-line and back up the field.

FANS CHEER CADETS

Getting to the 30-yard line, the head of the parade left the band, which moved on to the starting point as it continued to play its marching tunes. Gradually the long thin lines shaped themselves in more compact columns in midfield; it was the Stadium's most impressive scene. Following up the tail of the paraders the band moved out to bridge the gap between the goal posts and the 20-yard line. Meanwhile the procession continued on down the field under the north goal post, and closing up ranks until that dozen odd hundred of the nation's finest stood erect and stiff in single massed unit.

As the last of the marchers reached his destination a roar that split the welkin went up from the stands.

With cheerleaders giving the signal the assembled cadets sent up a siren followed by a cheer. The men at the head of each line went to the rear, the corps about faced and, with doffed caps, uttered another cheer, and then, with the band playing a suitable little tune, the soldiers went off at a dog trot, one column at a time, to their section in the stands. The first there mounted to the top rows and presented a colorful picture as they scrambled up at a lively gait.

GLENVILLE READY

GLENVILLE, W. Va., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Glenville's footballers finished their only practice session yesterday in preparation for the Potomac State Cubbys here today. The teams played a 7-7 tie last year.

Dempsey Booed In Exhibition Fights

MOLINE, Ill., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Jack Dempsey drew a crowd of 4,500 spectators into Moline Field House last night, but boos and cheers mingled equally as he fought two-round no-decision bouts with George Nerone, billed as champion of Greece, and Pete Wistort, of Chicago, a couple of heavyweights.

ARMY TRAINS GUNS ON PITT

class of Bulldog Reider and Heller ready to go, and with two crackerjacks at fullback, Clark and Luch, will give the husky Army line a real workout. It is not thought Capt. Jack Price will have much time on his hands to look at the stands today. Not that Capt. Jack figures to do any such thing, no matter how easy the going, but Price is in for a long afternoon. Pitt likes to pick on all-America players. The plays the Panthers will shoot at and around Mister Price will not be counted on the digits of one mitt.

The entire Pitt forward wall the one Coach Jack figures on starting is made up of veterans who realize the import of today's struggle. There is no hallowed tradition behind the game for Army, and the Cadets cannot be expected to reach the peak the Panthers are due to attain. Army does not have to gain such heights, for the Cadets figure to hold a psychological edge over Pitt as it is.

A week back Pitt staggered and slipped through to a 14-6 win over Carnegie. Sutherland's first November team of 1931 didn't look so hot. Seldom, if ever, have Pitt elevens gone sour two November Saturdays in a row, and with such a test confronting them as the Army, it is difficult to imagine the Panther laddies stumbling this afternoon.

LINEUPS SET

After yesterday's final workouts, the Army at Shady Side Academy in strict seclusion, and the Panthers in their own ball park, starting lineups were announced, or better, were hinted at by the rival coaches. Maj. Ralph Sasse, of Army, pleased with the form exhibited by his Cadets this week, plans to use Quinn and King at the ends, with Capt. Jack Price and Suarez at the tackles and Summerfelt and Trice at the guards. Lazar or Senter will be at center. (this is no joke) and Bob Carver is to start at quarterback with Stecker and Brown at the halves and Kilday at fullback.

For Pitt Capt. Eddie Hirshberg and Rip Collins will be in there at the terminals. MacMurdo and Quaise face the test of their careers at the tackles. Hart Morris, broken hand or not, and Mike Milligan are the guard choices, with the All-America bet, Ralphie Daugherty, at center. Hogan or Cutri will be used at quarterback. Bulldog Reider and Heller are sure shots for the halves, with Clark or Luch, depending on the weather and the condition of the field, at fullback. If it is dry and fast, Clark will be in there, make no mistake.

Army's passing game, however, formidable and dangerous, hardly will be more potent than the Heller-to-Reider and Reider-to-Heller aerial combine offered by Pitt. It worked to perfection against Tech, and Heller caught a pip against the Notre Dame. Heller can throw 'em as well as any of the Cadet heavers, and he's exhibited unexpected class in pulling them in. Reider is murder if he gets hold of one.

The Cadets Corps rolled into the city this morning detrained at the P. & L. E. station. The Soiers, better than 1,200 strong, paraded to the City-County Building, where they were reviewed by Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, Maj. Gen. William R. Smith, superintendent of West Point; Mayor Charles H. Kline and his cabinet, members of City Council, Chancellor John G. Bowman, of Pitt, and James Francis Burke, general counsel for the National Republican party organization.

Gov. Pinchot will attend the game, but did not arrive in time to be on hand for the review.

The Stadium gates were thrown open to those hordes before noon. The Corps, after passing in review downtown, was slated to attend a luncheon at the Syria Mosque, tendered by the Pitt athletic council and the Army Alumni Association, at noon, and then march through the Stadium archway at 1 o'clock.

Spectators were urged to be in their seats as early as possible. The time between halves will be too short to allow the Soldiers to go through their formations at that time, and the main part of their maneuvers will be staged prior to the game commencing at 1:15.

Tonight the West Pointers will be guests of the Benny Havens Club, Army Alumni organization, at the ball in the William Penn, and will depart for West Point at midnight.

Army Harriers Defeat Panthers

The Army cross-country team defeated the University of Pittsburgh harriers in a duel meet over the four and one-half mile Schenley Park course this morning, 18-37. The Cadets won in the remarkable time of 24 minutes, 17 seconds, breaking the old mark by eight seconds.

Northam and Slade, of West Point, crossed the finish line in a dead heat, with Cline, of Pitt, finishing third. Allen, Army, was fourth; Skidmore, Army, fifth; Campbell, Army, sixth; Mazzei, Pitt, seventh; Smoyer, Pitt, eighth; Watkins, Pitt, ninth, and McCormick, Pitt, tenth.

58,000 TO SEE HARVARD PLAY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 15.—(AP.)—The undefeated Harvard football team encounters its strongest opposition of the season today when the Holy Cross crusaders pay their annual visit to the stadium. Indications pointed to a capacity crowd of 58,000.

The Crimson, although its objective game with Yale is but a week away, planned to use every available weapon to wipe out the 27-0 decision the Purple scored last year.

Holy Cross has met with backfield injuries and Coach John J. McEwan has been forced to rearrange his secondaries. When Fullback Don Kelly became incapacitated, Lee Griffin was moved from right halfback to the line-bucking position and McEwan had to weaken his backfield reserve strength by putting the flashy Tony Rovinski into Griffin's regular berth.

CATHOLIC U WINS, 21-6

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Catholic University's high flying Cardinals winged home with their sixth successive victory, 21 to 6 over St. Francis College, of Loretto, Pa., in Griffith Stadium last night to clamp an unbreakable hold on Dame Success for the season of 1931.

Catholic U managed to click at the start to take an early lead, following which the Red Flashes yielded two more touchdowns.

The single St. Francis score, which came in the second quarter, proved the feature of the game with Pete Reducca throwing a 40-yard pass to Red Velvick, who ran 34 yards to cross the goal line.

St. Francis tossed 23 passes, completing seven, for a total of 179 yards, and Catholic U heaving 10 and completing four for 87 yards.

HALFBACK KOPP SCORES THE FIRST POINTS FOR SOUTH HILLS AGAINST CARRICK HIGH

AMBRIDGE, MIDLAND TO CLASH TODAY

By JULIUS LEVIN

Despite the fact that the field of contenders for the W. P. I. A. L. football championship already has been reduced to five teams, another reduction looms today when all aspirants to the scholastic grid throne swing into action against formidable opponents.

One contender is certain to fall today in the battle between Midland and Ambridge at Ambridge, as both teams so far are undefeated. Ambridge, however, has held to tie scores by Mo[illegible] and Aliquippa. The two el[illegible]ns are, without doubt, the strongest teams in the Beaver Valley and indications point to a thrilling encounter.

WASHINGTON'S TEST

Washington High's Little Presidents, coached by the incomparable Hank Day, gets back into active competition after a week of idleness by engaging Foxy Miller's Turtle Creek Union machine. The Turtle Creek eleven has suffered only one setback, that at the hands of Ford City, 18-0, and may prove a stumbling block to the Blue and Black combination. The Little Presidents will be out for their sixth straight victory.

Out at McKeesport, Bill Sullivan's Tubers go after their eighth successive triumph by engaging Bill Campbell's Homestead High machine, while up at Clairton George Woodman's championship contenders will endeavor to increase their winning streak at the expense of Nate Lippe's Aliquippa combine. Lippe's team, after a miserable start, has shown a decided improvement and looms as a real test for the Clairton eleven.

ALIQUIPPA IMPROVES

Although Aliquippa was beaten by Washington, 54-6, Coach Woodman has warned his players not to take the contest too lightly. One of Aliquippa's big feats this season was holding the powerful Ambridge eleven to a scoreless tie.

Shady Side Academy's eleven will conclude its Tri-State Prep School schedule today by engaging University School in Cleveland. The junior teams of the two schools also are slated for a contest. Besides the two football games, the Shady ide and University School soccer teams will play in the morning.

Duquesne plays at Monessen, Uniontown at Connellsville, Vandergrift at New Kensington, Washington-Irving at Weston, Arnold at Aspinwall, Masontown at Georges Township, Avonmore at Youngwood, Trafford at Pitcairn, Monaca at Beaver Falls, Ellwood City at Rochester, Freedom at New Brighton, New Castle at Youngstown South, Grove City at Sharpsville, Lilly at Patton, and Huntingdon at Altoona in other big games today.

CLEVELANDERS BEATEN

FARRELL, Pa., Nov. 14.—St. Benedictine Academy of Cleveland, fell before the powerful Farrell High eleven, 43-0, here last night in the last game of the local season.

STAR BREAKS ARM

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 14.—John Paskavitch, star quarterback on the Bentleyville High football team, received a broken arm in the Bentleyville-Bellevernon game yesterday. He scored a touchdown shortly before he was injured. His team lost, 13-12.

WIN STREAK BROKEN

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., 14.—(AP.)—Elkins High School, one of the leading contenders for the State Scholastic football title, suffered its first defeat of the season at the hands of Morgantown yesterday. The score was 13 to 0.

GRID TITLE AT STAKE

DENVER, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Rounding into the final stretch, Utah University's Indians today will be called upon to meet the foil of the University of Colorado for the Rocky Mountain Conference football championship.

SOUTH HILLS, SCHENLEY COP

South Hills and Schenley High Schools will fight it out next week for the city scholastic football championship as a result of their prowess yesterday. South Hills copped the laurels for a second consecutive year in Section 2 by beating Carrick High, 13 to 7, at Oliver Field, while in Section 1 Schenley was being held to a scoreless deadlock by Peabody High at Allderdice Field.

MILITARY BALL ON NETWORK :-: Husing, Guest Writer, Boosts Barry Wood

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

GOV. GIFFORD PINCHOT speaks on WWSW at 8:30 tonight, the magic of radio annihilates distance by making neighbors of Havana, New York and Chicago in dance music on WCAE at 10 o'clock—and WJAS steps into the limelight at 11 o'clock by reporting the West Point military ball in the William Penn Hotel for a nationwide network of the Columbia Broadcasting System . . . the military ball, with Henry Biagini's Orchestra and Ted Husing at the microphone, should be the most resplendent program of the evening . . . and indeed the most colorful event that has been on local airwaves for a long time! . . . the Cadet Choir of 125 voices is to be a special feature.

Apropos of the tremendous interest in Army's visit to our city and the presence of the effervescent, jubilant Ted Husing, we have asked Mr. Husing to be guest writer of the column today . . . we are privileged to tell you by way of exclusive foreword that Ted will "cover" the Pitt-Army game in New York on October 15 next year and also the Notre Dame game at Pittsburgh.

A great boy is Ted, who writes you the following message:

Hello, Everybody!

Well, the promise I made all Pittsburgh last year, at the time of the game between Pitt and Notre Dame, has come true.

And am I happy? Believe YOU me!

After I had made the acquaintance of nearly every important football dignitary in your city last year, I was so taken with the remarkable hospitality which they bestowed upon me as a new visitor, that I promised to reciprocate by broadcasting the initial visit of the Kaydet Corp to Piratetown.

With a network of more than 50 stations, located in the principal municipalities of the country, you loyal civitans can readily understand the benefit which is derived from the national scope of the publicity afforded by this broadcast.

And so here we are, my crew and myself, awaiting the opening "beep" of the whistle which marks the beginning of gridiron hostilities between Jock Sutherland's Panthers and Ralph Sasse's West Point Mules.

Five distinctive and original features have been incorporated into the workings of our group this season and as perfect as the system is, we've found that one slight defect can throw the works out of kilter for as long as a quarter.

We are basing our reports this year on the fact that the uninitiated public can stand a technically accurate broadcast, in which is interposed language of the laity, coupled with an absence of statistical information.

We believe listeners want to hear the marvelous school bands and cheers which pierce the fall afternoons these days. So—we give a brief resume of the first and second halves, and all the color and background noise that we can.

Well, so much of the football stuff. Come on over to the Stadium today, and after the game, say hello. And incidentally, it NEVER rains when I'm going to do a broadcast of a football game, so you won't get wet. In six years, I've had only two rainy games.

The scores of some of the leading games today read to me as follows:

ARMY 13, PITT 13.
Holy Cross 13, Harvard 6.
Columbia 18, Brown 0.
Fordham 9, N. Y. U., 6.
Dartmouth 13, Cornell 12.
W. & J. 21, Bucknell 18.
Tulane 16, Georgia 9.
Syracuse 7, Colgate 6.
Northwestern 30, Indiana 6.
Notre Dame 66, Navy 0.
Lehigh 7, Lafayette 7.
Washington 9, Washington State 7.
Carnegie 6, Temple 10.

AND—on my all radio eleven, selected from the men whose play we actually see, Barry Wood, of Harvard, is still leading for the quarterback position. Be seein' ya

Duce Pledges Aid To Italian Business

ROME, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Premier Mussolini has assured industrial and agricultural interests of full government protection and warned them they must not take advantage of that protection by entering into a state of inertia.

Speaking at the closing session of the National Council of Corporations, the premier said he expected rival interests to eliminate friction and to co-operate for the nation's economic progress. They must not lose sight of the consumer's viewpoint, he declared.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Midwest football may be far superior to that played in the East, but the East does not have to bow to the Middle West when it comes to the broadcasting of football games.

The Northwestern-Minnesota battle must have been a rip-roaring affair, judging from the score, but to the listener it was dull and drab and lifeless . . . McNamee, for all his errors, manages to extract a good deal of color and excitement from a football game . . .

Celebrating Sousa's birthday brought broadcasters more newspaper space than they have obtained since the steam-shovels were trundled into Radio City's hole-in-the-ground . . . Strange to see the old bandmaster all dressed up, as Raymond Hitchcock used to say, in cutaway and striped trousers. We're used to seeing him in a naval officer's uniform and cap . . . Time may have quieted some of his arm-waving energy, but it has not dimmed his march-producing brain. He is still busy on marches, wrote seven this year, one of them for Chicago's new world's fair. His face does not show his 77 years. He looks younger today than Pryor or Damrosch.

Wonder how many times the "Stars and Stripes Forever" has been played. Sousa says he has played it himself more than 5,000 times. The inspiration for it came, he said, as he was returning from Europe, he caught sight of American soil . . . Hard to get accustomed to R. A. Rolfe's absence from the air waves. He's had so many ups and down that it is nothing new for him to find himself momentarily without a baton . . . Hope he has saved his money and the report is that he has—saved, to be exact, a quarter of a million dollars . . .

Test of a sports' announcer's skill is to make a horse show exciting to the ears. Broadcasters summoned Clem McCarthy to meet the test. Clem didn't disappoint. He came through with all the hushed expectancy, the rapid fire suspense that he musters for a Belmont stakes . . . When the events began to lose glamour he rushed to the microphones two boys, experienced in broadcasting, proceeded to talk with them about the horses doing tricks in front of them . . . He didn't mention the silk hats. And never were there so many silk hats in one place before . . . Nothing of the maudlin in Lindbergh's speech the other night. His talk was a model of brevity and directness . . . Mary Pickford appeared frightened . . .

LES QUAILEY — CONSTANCE CARROLL — TED HUSING

Ted Husing, ace sports announcer of CBS, explaining to Constance Carroll how he will use his "Announciator" system this afternoon in reporting the Pitt-Army game at the Stadium. Husing's assistant, Les Quailey, spots the players with the aid of binoculars and reports their movement, as well as that of the ball, on a panel containing 22 buttons, each button designating a player on the field. When Quailey presses one of these butions, ras that indicating the quarterback, it flashes a light on a corresponding panel used by Husing. Above this light on translucent glass is written the name of the player, providing rapid identification.

Is Public Dance Hall Unfit Place for Young Folk?

Annette is young, lonely, hungry for fun—

For lights, for music, for the swaying rhythm of a waltz or the quick patter of a fox trot.

So she has been going to public dance halls.

And now she is wondering about it. Because she has been told that No Nice Girl goes to such places.

"But what else can I do to find a little company and joy and laughter?" she cries dolefully. "Where can I go? And can't I be just as nice there as anywhere else?"

What would you do, Stranger? If you were in her place? Would you sit at home . . . or would you go out for a little light and music, too?

"Dear Miss Martin:

"Will you please tell me what you think of my problem. Maybe it won't seem so important to you but it has me doing a good deal of thinking and I'd like to know your opinion about it.

"Here it is.

"I have been going to public dances about twice a week for quite a while but I have been told today that the best of people don't go to such places.

"Now I am lonesome. I like fun. I go to night school three nights a week and seldom go out with any boys. And I have always acted like a lady when I have gone to these dances. I have never even allowed anyone to take me home after one of them. So when this discussion about public dances came up in the office where I work today it started me thinking.

NOBODY TO TAKE HER

"To tell the truth, a public dance would be the last place I would go if I had any chance to go anywhere else. I would much rather go to a private one but I have no one to take me.

"Mother tells me to get some nice boys to take me to places like that. I'd be delighted to, but where will I find these boys?

And do you think it is terribly cheap and wrong of me to go to dances like I do? Can't I be just as nice and behave just as well doing that as if I did go only to private, instead of public places?

YES OR NO"

I would like to know what you and the rest of the gang think about it.

Should I stay away from these dances or not? Please help me. ANNETTE."

There's the question . . .

What's your answer, Pal?

Where can a lonely girl go in our big careless, bustling cities, if not to a public hall?

Once every neighborhood had its lively group of youngsters. Every home had its own fun and its own parties . . . but in this age of two-by-four apartments and not-knowing-your-neighbor, where are the kids going to find their fun—if not in public places?

They need that fun. They need to meet other youngsters. They need to play, if they're going to stay healthy.

Are we going right by them?

Or are we two-timing them?

Think it over, and let's have your answer.

"TWO BY TWO"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Two-by-two. Cupid and I, and the man I stroll with, began to be conscious the other night in the glitter of a city street, of how many two-by-twos went by!

Says Cupid to us, "Here's an idea, my lady. Do you see, much to my satisfaction, how many people of all the living stream that flows by, on its way mostly to pleasure, go by twos? How many men bent upon laughter and food are going to be sharing it with a girl or a woman? How many women, furbished out in their best, with that deep look of happiness that lies in the eyes of a woman IN HER BEST, are furbished out for the delectation and admiration of some boy or man? How few are alone. And HOW alone-conscious they look when they are? Two-by-two; short man with tall girl. Smart man with dumb girl. And the other way about! Broad man with longish girl. And plump girl with lean man. Old and young and in between. But so often—two-by-two. And very happy-looking to be that way." And Cupid rubbed his hands together, and gave a tweak to the gardenia in his button hole.

I know the man I stroll with; and I—we were happy to be doing it together!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

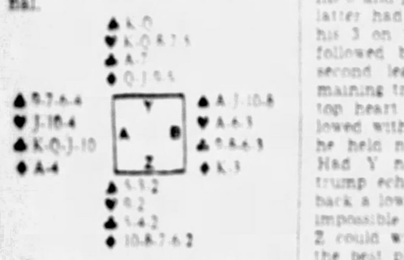
OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

The Three-Trump Echo

The three-trump echo consists of the play of a useful middle trump upon declarer's first lead, followed by your lowest trump upon his second lead. This enables your partner to count the declarer's trumps and also shows that you have a trump left in case partner can win the second trump trick and wants you to ruff a suit of which he knows you are void. The following hand shows the possible great utility of this signal.



Z and A passed. Y opened with 1-Heart, which B overcalled with 1-Spade. They were not playing that game where Z's four deuces might have won the pot, so he passed. A's hand counted 11 points (1 for four trumps, 6 for three club tricks, 3 for the ace of diamonds plus 1 point for the doubleton). That 8½ probable tricks made the situation look garnish and A jumped to 4-Spades. After it was all over Y admitted that game would have been made except for the fact that he noted Z's three-trump echo, proving that the declarer held only four trumps instead of the five spades for which Y gave him credit.

Z's opening lead was the 9 of hearts. This was covered by splitting A's honors, the 10 forced the Q and the A won the trick. A lead of a low diamond put dummy in, he led his top spade, Y put up his Q and B won with his ace. He shot back his J and put Y in the lead. The latter had noted that Z played his 3 on the first trump lead, followed by the deuce on the second lead, showing one remaining trump. Laying down his top heart, Y noted that Z followed with the 2, showing that he held no more of that suit. Had Y not noted the three-trump echo he would have led back a low diamond, deeming it impossible to save game unless Z could win of that suit. Even the best players at times make up their minds that certain things must be so and Y had at first deemed it impossible to save game unless Z could win a diamond trick, only the trump echo made him change his mind. Y led back his lowest heart and Z won the trick with his last trump, returning a club for Y's ace to gather in, making their fourth and last trick won.

Remember to echo only with three trumps—never with either two or four.

Chinese, Facing Gun, Issues Another Warning

It seemed an eternity before any sound came from the Chinese with the face so blank and inhuman despite the pain which he must be suffering and the rage which I knew must be consuming him. Silently he stood looking at me as if he either had not heard my command to leave his rope ladder and go away, or did not comprehend what I meant. Almost that blank stare made me repeat my command, but I knew that he had heard me, and was very sure that he understood my meaning perfectly. In a hard school I have learned the advantage of "letting the other fellow speak first" in any controversy, and I stubbornly locked my lips and waited in a stare as determined if not as unwinkingly impassive as his own.

Finally my persistence was rewarded. The thick lips opened and from them came croaking words:

"No understand."

"Oh, yes, you do." I spoke slowly, distinctly, wondering how long my strength would hold out. I felt as if I must crash to the floor at any second. "You understand perfectly. But I will say it again. Go away from here at once and drop that rope and pole."

He took his hands from the rope and set the jointed pole against a tree. Then he turned toward the window from which I was speaking. The movement, whether from accident or design, brought him a stride nearer the window, and I spoke sharply.

"Get back."

He stopped, but he had put one hand behind him and I guessed that he had a weapon of some kind concealed in his coat.

"I have a pistol," I told him, bringing my right hand into view, "and I know how to use it. If you come any nearer, you will be sorry."

"Give me paper, me go."

"No," I said firmly. "Never."

"Then me stay."

"The police will be here shortly," I said.

"No." He spoke with conviction. "You no want police meddle. You no call police."

He spoke with such conviction that I felt my throat muscles constrict a bit. How did he know so much, or had he simply made a random guess?

When he spoke next, without waiting for my answer this time, I was sure of that ghostly grin, more terrifying than black anger.

"You too plitty lady to shoot—and too plitty lady to have things happen your face. You give me paper now."

What was it he had behind him? A sudden fantastic terror shook me so that I had hard work steadying the hand which held the pistol. But I knew that I must not weaken now. He evidently did not believe either that the apparent toy in my hand was an effective weapon, or that I knew how to fire a gun. Just behind him, almost on a line with his body, there was a tall stump of a tree upon which Mrs. Tiger had an old iron kettle filled with growing nasturtiums.

"Do you see that kettle of flowers just behind you? Watch carefully."

I pointed the tiny pistol at the kettle and fired. The noise of the shot was negligible, but the ping of the bullet against the iron of the kettle was unmistakable.

"You are nearer than the kettle of flowers," I said quietly, "and—your body is not made of iron. Put whatever you have back into your pocket"—he had made a tugging motion with his hand—"and bring your hand out in front of you. Quick! I mean it."

"All light," he said, as calmly as if he were completing the sale of a pound of tea. "Me go now. But you maybe soon solly you no give paper. Velly, velly solly. You sure you no give paper now?"

"Very sure," I said steadily, though the threat had left me shaking inside. "Now listen carefully while I tell you what to do."

"Me listen," he said.

"Put your hands up above your head, high." I told him, and he obeyed me. "When I say 'go,' turn around and walk straight into that cornfield, and along a straight line to the other end of it."

The ghost of a grin again touched his lips, and I knew he was thinking that I had forgotten how completely the corn would hide him after a few steps.

"I shall be watching until you get to the other end, and so will the man whom I shall call as soon as you are on your way." I went on steadily. "Every fourth stalk you will pull up and hold high above your head and wave it so that I can see it, then drop it and go on to the next one. If you do not do this, I shall send the man here and my husband and father after you. They are coming from my home now."

Again that unhurried stare.

"You velly smlat lady," he said at last, managing to retain a certain aspect of immobile dignity despite his upheld hands. "Me do evlytling you say, but you velly solly you no give paper."

He turned away and marched steadily to the edge of the cornfield, entered it, and carefully obeying my instructions, proceeded across it. Regularly the waving cornstalks appeared high above the others upon the straight path he was pursuing, but he was less than a quarter of the way across when there was a brisk rapping at the kitchen door and Dicky's voice calling peremptorily:

"Madge, let me in! What is the matter?"

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Relation of Eyestrain to General Ill Health

A common experience of those who are specializing in eye examinations is to be told, "My eyesight is perfect. Certainly I don't need glasses because I can see everything."

Dr. Copeland

The fact is, this is the person who may be in greater need of lenses than one who has very defective sight. Naturally you will ask, "How can this be?"

If one has such defective vision that he just cannot see, of course he won't try, and therefore there is no strain. But if one has a quality of vision which makes it possible by an effort, even though that effort is unconsciously made, of course, he will go on using his eyes, flattering himself that these organs are normal because he can see even the finest type or the tiniest stitches.

The constant expenditures of such effort is damaging to the nervous system. It results in constant drainage of nerve energy. It tires the delicate muscles of the eyes. It causes too much blood to flow into the parts. It lays the foundation for serious disease of the eyes. Without enlarging upon this phase of the question, let me leave with you the thought that you are incompetent to judge whether or not your eyes are normal. It is only by a careful test by one who has scientific training that the true condition of your eyes can be determined.

This is the reason why many persons have headaches and backaches and the symptoms of what is called "nervous indigestion." Nature resents such improper demands upon her. It stands to reason that if you use up your nervous energy in order to see perfectly, you have not left enough nervous energy to carry on the other functions of the body.

If time permitted, I could say a lot more about the relationship of eyestrain to general ill health. I hope I have said enough to make it clear to you that you can ill afford to neglect periodical examinations of the eyes. We are constantly preaching the importance of periodical general examinations. No such examination is complete unless the eyes have been tested.

Answers to Health Queries

L. Z. Q.—A woman who has been brooding over financial losses, witnessed a car accident, became ill and finally made several attempts to take her own life. There is no history of mental disease or disorders in the family. Is there any reason why the son should fear getting married under the circumstances?

A.—No.

A Constant Reader Q.—What causes night sweats? About three months ago I had influenza and this condition has persisted ever since, and is so bad that I hate to go to bed. I have lost weight and feel very nervous. I am taking cod liver oil as a tonic.

A.—This trouble may be due to weakness, nervousness, a run-down condition, or there may be a possible lung disturbance. Have an examination so that definite advice and treatment can be outlined. Improvement in your general condition should bring about general results.

* * *

Q.—Is there anything you can do to stop growing?

A.—No.

A. E. D. Q.—What causes pains on top of the head all the time?

A.—This may be due to high blood pressure. It would be wise to have your blood pressure taken.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Squint and grow turkey tracks. Pull the eyes together and grow frowns. So it is that the sisterhood makes its own portraits. Being face conscious is an insurance against wrinkles.

A cowlick, once the horror of every Pity Little Sing, is now recognized for what it is, the beginning of a wave line. It defines the point of a natural parting, and should be given consideration in the designing of the coiffure. It goes dippy in its own hirsute fashion.

An oily skin is rich soil for blackheads and pimples. It is advisable for the girl with the shimmering phiz to cut down on fats, starches and sweets because they are highly concentrated foods and are heat producing. Lemon, orange and grape fruit juice are good for her special care, also tomato juice. A few drops of simple tincture of benzoin added to the cold rinsing water after the face is washed, and used with friction, will influence oil ducts to pipe down.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

High School Girl

Dear Mrs. Beckman:

Last year, during my first year in High School, I came across several problems which I was unable to solve. If the same questions come up I want to know just the right thing to do and say.

1. In school you come across all kinds of pupils and although I did not make friends with all of them, when my problem arose I certainly did not want to embarrass them in any way. For instance, when a girl came over and asked me to lend her my comb, and I did not wish to, what would be the polite thing to say without embarrassing her?

2. When one of my girl friends inquire as to where I get anything to wear or what I paid for it, what should I say, if I am not very anxious to furnish a reply to the inquiry?

DUTCHY

Good questions, these are, every one of them, and ones that inevitably arise in the school life of today.

1. Perhaps it won't be possible not to "embarrass" her, but you should be firm about this. The only thing to do is to say the direct thing, for you probably couldn't be very exquisite with a girl who would be so indelicate as to make this request. So say, perhaps, "Do you mind very much if I don't? It's just one of my pet selfishnesses that I don't like to share my comb. I know you'll understand." And she will! Say this graciously, and that will take the sharpness away from it.

2. This is a more difficult problem. I've seen some very clever people, unwilling to tell even a white lie, meet this with "complete deafness." That is, they just make believe that they didn't hear the question, and turn to someone else with a comment that starts the conversation in that direction. The only other alternative is to "forget" what you paid for the article.

Parents of the Engaged

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young man, while attending the university, met and became engaged to a young lady. Her parents and his live in the same city, but are not acquainted.

It is a foregone conclusion that this young couple will wed.

Now, the problem is—who should make the first gesture toward the acquaintance of the respective parents, the young lady's parents or the young man's parents? Should the young man's parents call on the young lady's parents, or vice versa?

D.

If the couple really are engaged, and the parents of both know it, it would seem the most natural thing in the world that they should meet, even if neither fiancee or the fiance is in the town in which the parents reside.

The best form would be for the mother and father of the fiance to call on the mother and father of the fiancee since she is the one who should have the first welcoming visit.

Household Hints

Skin tomatoes before frying with bacon.

Store silver in a box filled with powdered starch and it will be quite bright when taken out.

If you are going to discard the old straw hat, cut out the top and bind it with tape, for use as a table mat for hot dishes or a resting place for a flower pot.

A mixture of paraffin and silver sand is the very best thing with which to clean stained earthenware sinks. The paraffin also acts as a fine disinfectant.

Canvas-covered suitcases which have been torn or damaged at the corners can be repaired by patching with strong unbleached linen. Make the patch larger than the damaged area and stick with rubber solution or ordinary gum. To disguise the patch, paint over it to match the covering.

THE LOVE TRAP -:- Story of a Girl's Struggle For Love and Happiness -:- By ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

Mary and Steve Decide to Accept Eileen's Odd Proposition

CHAPTER XXI

Eileen's voice was low, fraught with restrained emotion—insolence mingled with anger, perhaps.

"You are wrong. My happiness is in Steve's hands—not yours." Mary's reply was confident, on the surface, but the force of the other woman was not to be easily dismissed. Eileen Calvert was vigorously electric with inner power, alive with a leopard-like energy. In the event of conflict, would Mary, single handed, be able to conquer? For a moment she had a queer sense of alarm. But the next instant she knew she could not and would not be intimidated.

"Are you willing to listen to facts?"

"Always," said Mary.

The brown eyes, bright now with concentrated alertness, studied Mary's face for the present. Eileen had banished hostility.

"Your happiness is in my hands, she said carefully, because neither you nor Steve have the ability to see far ahead. I have. If you two should be married fairly soon it is a hundred to one that poverty would disillusion both of you inside of a year."

"I've heard something like that before," Mary said with a faint smile.

Her dear dead mother had uttered warning against the blight of being a young man's slave. Buck Landers, too, had harped on the same theme. And now she seemed fated to hear again the old, dire argument from her rival.

"I think I know more about poverty than you will be able to tell me, Miss Calvert. I grew up in a poor home—and I don't believe you did."

"No. I've been spared that and I imagine you would be happy to avoid poverty yourself in the future," returned Eileen unruffled. "Do you realize that for several years at least Steve will have no earning capacity at all, beyond his own meagerest needs?"

OPPORTUNITY FOR STEVE

"I can wait—I'm good at waiting."

"If you mean that it's in my power to give you a sporting chance—you and Steve together—to escape the grimy hardship of vulgar poverty," said Eileen Calvert quickly, "Love, after all, seems to be such an insecure commodity that it belongs on a sporting basis. Tell me, would you be willing to give up Steve for a year? If you were certain that, at the end, he would be beautifully established in an economic way? I mean, would you be willing to forego an immediate marriage with its certain poverty, and take a chance that Steve—if he still wanted you at the end of the year—would be able to take care of you decently?"

Mary sensed that the other was about to make her some extraordinary proposition. She was not much interested. The girl was her enemy, and nothing she could say or do would be well meant.

"I'm not afraid to wait one year or ten years for Steve," she told Eileen.

"Then let's be sensible and give each other an even chance for happiness," Eileen said, eagerly persuasive. "I happen to own a sugar plantation in Cuba—my grandfather left it to me individually. It is quite extensive and very profitable. I, personally, can offer Steve the position of field superintendent. It is more or less primitive down there, with all of the Negro help and the fermenting smells of the grinding mills—a jungle of sugar cane—I will promise you—at the end of a year Steve will be, at least, assistant administrator. He will earn enough for all of your needs, and considerably more besides. Of course, there are engineers and their wives and other officials there, too. It is not a bad place for a year or two. I will see to it that Steve is advanced. He will learn the business of sugar, and if he chooses, a place will be made for him to employ that knowledge later in the United States. I can guarantee you that he will be safely on the road to an independent fortune."

BRUTAL FRANKNESS

Mary listened patiently. It was, she realized perfectly, a wonderful opportunity for him. It was marvelous—but something warned her . . . It was too good to be true.

"Why are you telling me all this, Miss Calvert?" she asked, honestly curious.

"Because I want to get Steve away from you for a year at least and see what happens," Eileen Calvert told her with brutal frankness. "I'm making you a sporting offer. Let him go to Cuba for a year, and if he still wants to marry you—I won't have a thing more to say. You stand to lose him, but if you're wise it means that you won't be marrying a pauper. It's the difference between want and luxury. Are you game enough to take the chance?"

Mary's first impulse was vainglorious: to tell her that the offer was impertinent and unneeded. But how could she, alone, decide this? It was Steve's affair as much as her own. Besides, it did appear to be a glowing opportunity. She had a swift vision of Steve in white linen and a pith helmet, a dominant romantic man of importance in a picturesque world.

"Does Steve know about this chance?"

"No, not yet. But don't worry, he will accept it if you tell him to. I'm sure. You are the one to whom I must sell the idea."

"In the hope that he'll forget me in a year?" Mary smiled ironically, but Eileen's eyes were deadly serious. Her face had the hard look of one who risks all on the turn of the card.

CATCH IN PROPOSITION

"Yes—why not? I care for him and I'm not too proud to say that you've caused considerable anguish to my pride. Yes, I do think he will forget you, provided he doesn't see you for a year."

It sounded like a good risk to Mary, because her faith in Steve's fidelity could not easily be shaken by another woman's words. It was a good proposition, but . . . there was a catch in it.

"And during that year, Miss Calvert, do you agree to keep away from him, too?"

The brown eyes lit with quick wild flame. Eileen Calvert was not a girl . . . she was a desperate woman, fighting her heart battle with every weapon at her command. . . . Already she had dragged her pride in the dust, but enough of it remained to spurn the easy lie.

"Of course I intend to see him!" Her voice was flat with a subtle fury. "I expect to go to Cuba. If you can't hold him against me—what is your love worth? All of my cards are on the table, face up. At present I think he is fascinated with you. If you marry him now, it's because you're afraid to trust his love. You'll both drag each other down into the mire of poverty. If you truly love him, you'll give him his chance. What are you—a clinging doll, or a woman?"

A force that was a blast of cold energy emanated from Eileen Calvert and swept Mary with a shivering uncertainty. A challenge and a threat . . . a danger far greater than any peril ever conjured by the heavy hands of Buck Landers.

What did her love for Steve, and his for her, mean, if it lacked imperishable faith? Was she coward enough to stand in the way of his success? Again that queer shiver reached her . . . Steve alone in the tropics with Eileen . . .

EILEEN PUZZLING

Mary and Eileen walked back to the house together. Any pretense between them, they both understood, was ridiculously out of place. Of the two, Eileen Calvert was the calmer.

"I've spoken my piece, and now I'm going to clear out," she said almost coldly. "I'm going tonight to visit in Southampton. You see, I'm not afraid to leave you a clear field—I won't be back until Steve is able to leave. I haven't the ghost of a reason for leaving—except that I . . . fer not to see you two mauldout. But, please, don't . . . k you are driving me away. I'm quite content to leave you with him, because—well, I'm really not afraid of you."

"But you mustn't leave your own home!" Mary's voice was a little dazed. "Steve is not in danger now—there's no reason for me staying. I'll go away myself—"

Eileen cut her short with the assurance that she had intended to go to Southampton in any case. It was not a sentimental gesture.

"All I ask of you," she said concisely, "is to put the Cuba proposition fairly before Steve. He has an equal right with you to decide it, you know."

Mary conceded Steve's rights in the decision. "But, do you mean for me to tell him that you hope this separation will break us up?"

"I don't care what you tell him. I'm not easily humiliated. What Steve thinks now is not overwhelmingly important; it's going to be a passage of time that will give us all a correct perspective."

There was a quality about Eileen Calvert that was incomprehensible to Mary. How could any girl be so coldly calculating, yet so terribly swayed by an emotion as hot as love? Was it possible to build wisdom on a foundation of passion? Or was all this merely the arrogance of a wealthy and spoiled child who knew what she wanted, and went after it with bold shrewdness? It certainly did take all kinds of people to make the world . . .

Eileen telegraphed her Southampton friends that she was leaving immediately, and, with a brief farewell to Mary in the presence of the family, she left for the station in the car, her bounteous luggage looking rich and stylish. Yes, she was a spoiled child and her acquiescent family allowed her complete independence. The Calverts, being highly civilized, had no trace of petty domestic tyranny in their daily life. Their wealth had freed them from the countless hardships and restrictions that had surrounded Mary and her people; the hard discipline of pain and serious worry scarcely touched them at all.

A MIGHTY POWER

Mary, living in their house, was beginning to comprehend that Eileen Calvert, who had never known grief or disappointment, would turn naturally to her most familiar antidote for all unpleasantness. Money—wealth that was the sovereign remedy. It brought smoothness to life and healed all hurts. The sugar plantation in Cuba, Steve's opportunity down there, Eileen's plan to win back his love—all were rooted in money. The use of money represented her hope and happiness! And against this mighty power, Mary, with her empty pockets, had no defense except love.

Several days passed before she felt that Steve was improved enough to listen to the Cuba proposition. He was getting better now with encouraging rapidity. With one of Bill's heavy silk lounging robes over his pajamas, he sat for nearly an hour a day in his own room. The vigil of the nurse had relaxed considerably. Mary, wearing one of her slim peach-colored dresses that lent extreme youth to her pretty face, sat on the arm of Steve's easy-chair, in order that he could not see the worry in her eyes.

"Steve, dear," she said, smoothing his hair back from his forehead, "suppose you had a wonderful chance in the business world—would you take it, if we had to postpone our marriage for a year?" Her voice shook a little, but he failed to notice it.

"I'd jump at any chance that would help me take care of you properly, darling," he said. "There's so much more to marriage than getting married. We must look to the years and years in the future—you bet your life I'd give up a year right now to build our future on a solid basis."

Despite the surface wisdom of his words, Mary felt a sinking of the heart. A glorious year wiped out of their lives! Of course she could trust Steve in Cuba, she told herself, with Eileen Calvert, but——

Little pangs of fear and jealousy began like tiny devils to attack her faith . . . Steve and Eileen for a year in Cuba . . .

"Nobody on earth could ever take you away from me, Steve, could they?"

He looked up in surprise at the tremor in her voice; he did not feel the trembling of her body close to his.

"What a funny little kid you are!" he laughed. "There never was—never will be—another girl on earth for me but you. You're the lightning and the moonlight to me—all I want is a chance to go out and battle the world and bring the spoils home to put at your lovely little feet. . . ."

Her heart throbbed with serene confidence at his words; she drank in the ecstasy of blissful joy that comes to a woman deeply loved by her heart's choice. How marvelous it was now she did not fear to tell him of Eileen's offer.

Listening closely to all Mary told him, Steve sat with one of her hands clasped in both of his. Reduced to bare words, Eileen's offer of an executive position was unattractive. Steve nodded approvingly.

"It's a kind of work I'd like," he interjected. "I can see some future to it."

Mary hesitated before telling him that Eileen hoped by this separation to break up their engagement. It really sounded a bit silly. Still, Eileen was an extraordinary girl, and quite capable of such remarkable ideas.

"Oh, Eileen is just trying to be dramatic about that love stuff," he said with annoyance, after Mary had told him. "She's a fine girl and I used to think I loved her—but this talk of breaking us up is just a queer twist her pride has taken. I can't believe she has any such real intention. It would be useless, if she did have, because we belong to each other, Mary. At the same time, I'm not going to be a fool. I'm going to grab this shot in Cuba. I suppose we could put on a lot of false pride and spurn her offer of a job, but let's not be so idiotic. It's decent work, and I'll put all I've got into the job, I'm not going to pass up this chance just because it's handed to me on a silver platter. The only thing that would make me turn it down would be if you objected to it."

"Are you leaving it for me to decide?" Mary asked.

"Yes, because I'm not going to have you heart-broken over anything. I can trust you and you can trust me—what difference does a year's separation make?"

"Then I consent," Mary said, with a little wobble in her tone, "I won't be jealous or afraid, either, Steve. But when you're down there in Cuba and Eileen comes down to visit you—I'll just shut my eyes and pray, darling . . ."

"If you can't hold him against me—what is your love worth?"

Now she did not fear to tell him of Eileen's offer.

LOVE COMES BUT ONCE

(Or, Confessions of a Wife)

Synopsis—Years have passed. Yuba and Tuba are still playing the Big Game, making little or no headway, although aviation and television have advanced considerably. Lucy Mulch, engaged to the captains of both teams, is beginning to wonder if Clark Gable might not be a better bet.

Peverel St. Swack noticed "Dimples," the beloved coach, sobbing on his bench. "What's the matter, Dimp?" asked the captain kindly. "The mascot has had pups," murmured the coach brokenly. The sturdy Grandstand Old Man of Football wrung his hands. "Never mind," the captain whispered. "I'll go in and play as I have never played before." "Is that a promise?" asked the coach sardonically, but the burly football star made no answer. "Let me tell you one thing, St. Swack," the coach went on angrily. "You've got to keep out of the grandstands. Everytime I want someone to complete a pass I find you up in the bleachers mugging with this Mulch mamma." St. Swack turned red, then white, then red again. "You are speaking of the woman I love!" he grated.

Just as he was about to kirk. . . . .

Pittsburgh Is Honored

The Visit of the West Point Football Team Is a Notable Event—Brief Comment on Local News.

*There is no question as to how the people of Pitts*burgh feel about the coming of the West Point football team today to play Pitt. They consider themselves honored. It is doubtful if the visit of the most illustrious person would arouse greater or more friendly interest. People with only the faintest interest in football are stirred over the coming of the cadets.

*As American citizens we have a proprietary inter*est in the United States Military Academy. It is our own institution. No doubt, therefore, there are not a few Pittsburghers who, like Senator David A. Reed, have been neutral in their attitude towards the game, and will be proud of the prowess of the victorious team, whichever it may be.

It is a feather in Pitt's cap to have brought the Army team here. Another feather is the rapidly developing beauty of the Cathedral of Learning, which came into the news this week with the announcement that the Reformed Hungarian Beneficial and Sick Society has contributed $500 towards a fund to decorate the Hungarian Room in the Cathedral.

The rooms in Pitt's Cathedral dedicated to and furnished by the various nationalities are giving the university an international reputation. Carnegie Tech is also known throughout the world as a result of the international conferences on bituminous coal, the third of which will open Monday morning with addresses by President Thomas S. Baker, Gov. Ritchie, of Maryland; Sir Harry E. Brittain and Myron C. Taylor.

Dr. Friedrich Bergius, the German chemist who has just been awarded, conjointly with another scientist, the Nobel prize in chemistry, attended the coal conferences in Pittsburgh in 1926 and 1928. That adds interest to the forthcoming conference and also to the Nobel prize. Dr. Bergius has been awarded the honor in recognition of his process for extracting gasoline from coal.

*The extent to which coal affects our welfare is in*dicated by the scope of the program for the Carnegie Tech conference. The schedule for Wednesday calls, for example, for discussion of stream pollution and air pollution. Coal is chiefly responsible for both, and they are subjects of such timeliness and importance that Dr. Baker deserves thanks for finding a place for them in the program.

The pollution of the Allegheny River by sulphuric acid drainage from coal mines has reached such a point that the City Bureau of Water has been using as much as $1,000 worth of chemicals a day of late to neutralize the acid and make the water fit for use. Dr. Herman Bach's address, telling how the problem is handled in Germany, should be well worth hearing.

Dr. Baker has shown appreciation of one of the annoying features of stream pollution in inviting the Izaak Walton League to attend the stream session. The disappearance from the local rivers of fish, unable to live in the poisonous water, is a real misfortune, and it is much to be desired that a way shall be found to restore the fish and bring back the sport of angling.

The State Fish Commission reports, by the way, that in Pennsylvania's uncontaminated streams exceptionally good fishing is being enjoyed this month. Fine catches of wall-eyed pike are being made at the junction of Tuscarora Creek and the Juniata River. Fishing is better in the autumn than in the summer, a fact which angling devotees might keep in mind in planning their vacations.

Air pollution is a problem of no less importance to Pittsburgh than stream pollution, and Dr. Baker has shown good judgment in arranging for several papers on that subject at the coal conference. We have found, through the researches conducted by the Mellon Institute under the direction of H. B. Meller, that the elimination of dense smoke is not the only thing necessary to purify the air.

In addition to dense smoke, the emission of which can be prevented, invisible dust and noxious gases issue from the smokestacks of factories and dwellings. Several councilmen whose attention has been called to the injurious effects of these invisible impurities in the atmosphere are understood to favor the expansion, eventually, of the Bureau of Smoke Regulation into a Bureau for the Regulation of Air Pollution.

*The enlargement of the Bureau of Smoke Regu*lation is not considered advisable at the present time because it would necessitate an increase in the personnel, and all efforts are being directed now towards a reduction in the city payroll in the interest of economy. Which is simply another reminder of the fact that you can't have your cake and eat it, too.

The Legislature is being called upon to decide whether to eat the cake or keep it. It is being asked to raise large sums of money for unemployment relief, and at the same time is being asked not to increase taxes. Nearly every money-raising proposal is being vigorously opposed. The public hearings to be held by the House Ways and Means Committee may have educational value.

There should be fairness in laying new taxes. The burden should be equitably distributed. That principle would be violated by the proposed additional tax on cigarets, which already are heavily taxed by the federal government. Gov. Pinchot and the Legislature should use their wits and find things to tax that are not already loaded down with a high impost.

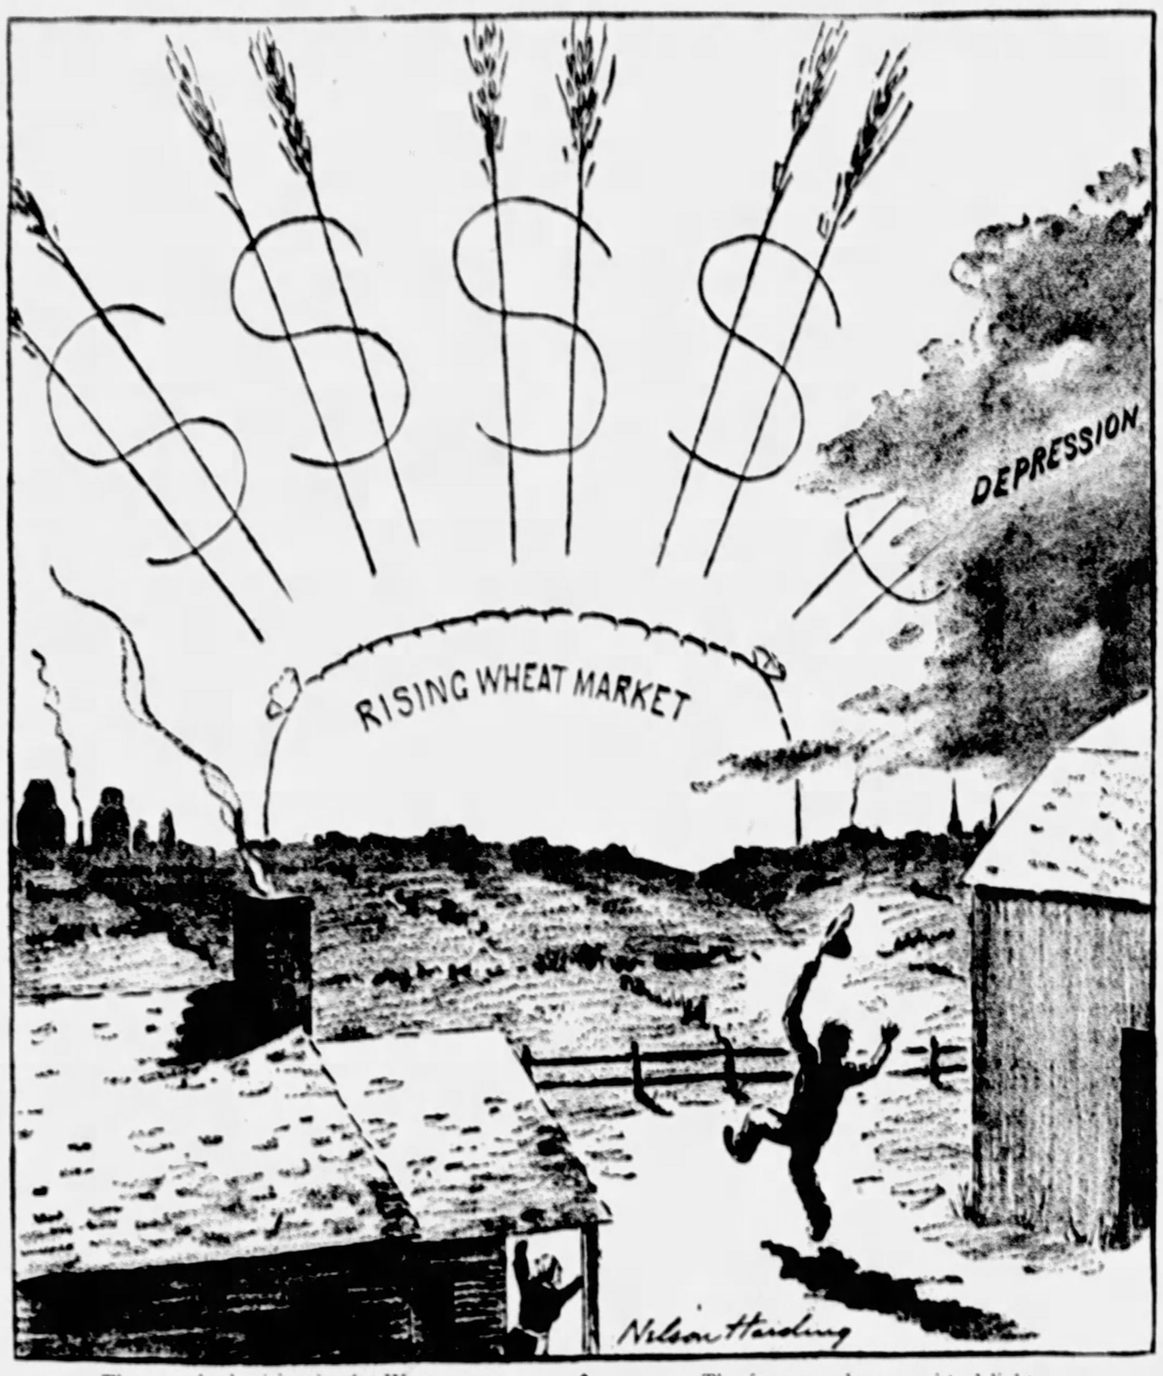
The indictment of three well-known Pittsburghers yesterday by the federal grand jury on charges of evading income taxes is a reminder of the danger of trying to "hold out" on Uncle Sam. Criminal racketeers are said to have concluded in many cases that it is better frankly to disclose their illicit incomes to the federal revenue collectors and trust to their being secretive about it.

The Sunday Sun-Telegraph will have a full report of the Pitt-Army football game and also articles on several other matters referred to in this column. The American Weekly Magazine Section will have an interesting article by Prof. Rene Thenevin about a race of supermen who perished 20,000 years ago and who seem to have possessed knowledge that has only recently been rediscovered.

The Gravure Section will present reproductions in full color of three of the most remarkable paintings in the Carnegie Institute's international exhibition. There will also be a page of pictures of babies, hunting and fishing scenes of the current season, and, in the "Remember?" department, photographs recalling people and events of long ago.

A Sunrise in the West -:- -:-

By Nelson Harding



The sun that's rising in the West
Is greeted like a welcome guest,
For when it is ascending high
All gloom and darkness leave the sky.

The farmer welcomes with delight
The end of his long, cheerless night,
And sees in each effulgent ray
The coming of a better day.

Two Lessons in This Picture

The Future of Flying. The Danger of Money "Too Dear."

STRANGE AIRPLANE, SMOKE SHOWS INDUSTRIAL BOOM.

This interesting picture shows one of the modern auto-giro airplanes, high in the clouds, and below, the British city of Middlesborough, its factories active, each chimney spouting smoke, for the first time in a long while.

You know about the new airplane, with the strange, revolving wings above; you've probably seen it and know how it works, how it enables a flier to descend gradually to the earth, almost in a straight line, and to rise in the same way.

But you are puzzled when you read the cause of the suddenly reviving activity and manufacturing prosperity in this British town.

BUSINESS IS BETTER BECAUSE THE BRITISH POUND IS WORSE.

In other words, since England has abandoned the gold standard, and the value of the pound sterling has dropped, British business has revived, mills are at work, prosperity seems to be coming back.

From this America learns that it may be possible to have money TOO expensive, so hard to get that other people can't buy from you.

The French deliberately cut the value of their currency by 80 per cent, reducing the value of the franc from a little less than 20 cents to a little less than 4 cents.

Then they proceeded to accumulate two and a half billions in gold, taking it from England, from Spain, from everywhere.

Thus France is able to pay her debts with a cheap franc that permits her to pay really only 20 per cent of what she borrowed.

The British, not intentionally, but because they were compelled to, with all their gold drained away by France, abandoned the gold standard, leaving the pound to shift for itself.

It dropped, of course, losing a dollar in value, very quickly.

But with those CHEAPER POUNDS other countries can buy British goods.

And, in consequence, you see this British manufacturing city starting up, its factories going, men working, thousands that were on the DOLE now on a LEGITIMATE payroll.

There is a lesson for the United States here, with its dollar so high in price that other nations can't buy from us.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Why a Man Marries

It is beginning to look as though the chief aim of the modern man's life is to dodge marriage. He may fall for gold-diggers, promoters, bond-salesmen, book agents, bootleggers and racketeers—but not for a "marrying-girl!" HE knows the marriage-racket!

* * *

Oh yeah? But women know better. She knows that while there are lots of things in this world that a man can live without—WOMAN isn't one of them!

I don't mean "women"—I mean ONE WOMAN! I mean old-fashioned love and companionship. (Don't strike me!) I mean "the" woman!

A man may be strong enough to bear his own burdens, and even to keep his own sorrows and troubles to himself. He may be able to do his own cooking, take care of his own clothes and even take his own cough medicine.

He may not need any woman's shoulder to weep on—but he's GOT to have somebody with whom to share his triumphs, his joys, his brilliant ideas and his illusions about himself!

* * *

He MUST have somebody to help him ADMIRE himself, believe in himself and amuse himself!

* * *

He must have somebody to whom he can confide his new invention and talk out his bright idea, his great plot, his brilliant novel, his new scheme or his secret ambition, until it formulates itself in his mind.

He's got to have somebody to tell him how WONDERFUL he is!

Lots of women may flatter him, but their songs of praise will be full of false notes—until he meets the woman who really understands him, believes in him, sees through him, yet glorifies him.

* * *

He MUST have sympathy, companionship — and somebody to help him keep all his illusions about himself bright and shining!

Any man will listen to his troubles and sympathize — but only a woman who loves him will sit all evening and actually rejoice while he talks about his triumphs!

* * *

A man may work, play, eat, drink, achieve, succeed — but he cannot really LIVE without woman! Isn't nature wonderful—and kind?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—With a passing glance no one would imagine I've just recently returned from a cruise on a private yacht. I'm practically the plain old shoe I was before sailing away—tying my own neckties, mingling with working people along the sidewalk and even waving to corner cops.

Save for writing "lay-to" for periods in telegrams instead of "stop" few would distinguish me from the ordinary run of landlubbers. Yet in looking in the mirror there is something in the reflection of the vast deep—the leathered cheek, squinty eye and rolling swagger. Blast my timbers!

A fellow guest was Meredith Nicholson, whose marine adventures up to now were limited to crossing the Wabash in a row boat. Our host was—well it doesn't matter. He won't be asking us again. Anyway, next year they'll be giving yachts free with six banjo lessons by mail, I hear. And we'll all ride.

Upon receiving the telephonic invitation for the cruise I explained that Mr. Nicholson had suddenly arrived in town and I would like to bring him. It was highly agreeable so I called up one of the large and newer hotels, asked to be connected with their guest and got the novelist.

"But I have no yachting clothes," he said. "No one yachts in Indiana." I haven't yachting duds either, but he didn't have to know. So I comforted him with: "Just wear a plain old business suit and so you won't feel conspicuous I'll do the same thing."

At 6:30 in the evening we met at a boat club landing at Twenty-sixth street and the East River. Mr. Nicholson sported a wing collar, mourning black Ascot tie, derby, high button shoes, red silk suspenders and otherwise was a living picture of "What the Well Dressed Indianapolitan Is Wearing." But a figure of immaculate piety withal.

As we strolled down the dock length a white ducked sailor inquired our names, saluted and led us to an 8-foot dinghy bobbing alongside. "This is a heck of a yacht," whispered Mr. M. Nicholson and sneered, "and only one sailor." He didn't know it was the motor boat to zip us out to the real thing.

From then until we returned five and a half hours later I was constantly embarrassed by Mr. Nicholson—who from now on will be just Nick. He's lucky I confine it to that, too. No sooner had we mounted steps to the yacht's deck than he inquired for the wireless operator, something the boat didn't have. His idea was to put on the lug and broadcast sundry messages here and there to the corn belt.

* * *

Sudden thought: Every time I am on a private yacht—twice to be exact—I always think of a swell headline for the home town paper: "Local Boy Missing On Millionaire's Yacht."

* * *

After we stretched out languidly in the wicker chairs, refreshed with frosty beakers of lemonade, the host passed around his guest book for signatures. There was a space for some sentiment and across space for one's name. Nick signed first and when the book came to me I noticed he had written: "On a yot! Wot!" for his sentiment, which may help you understand with what I had to put up.

* * *

Our path was down the East River, out through the placid harbor and away to ruffled Sandy Hook. It was a beautiful night, but there was no moon, which seemed to disturb Nick. Frequently he would pace up and down the deck, lean out over the rail, look skyward and shriek: "What—no moon?" You would have thought it was the host's fault."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

She writes—

"Once—I think it was some years ago—I saw in your column a prayer you had written for 'a common day.' I wondered why you wrote it. It did not seem to me that common days needed prayer. I suppose that was because no day seemed common to me then. Everything was so hopeful.

"But these last months I have come to understand. No, we're not standing in the breadline yet. I guess we'll manage to get through somehow. But—life's getting my goat, Elsie. It's all so shabby and monotonous. I've kept hoping something would happen, but nothing does. I have known grief, when our little girl died. And real danger—once we were caught in a forest fire. But I have never known anything that gets me down like this. I could use that prayer now, if you'll print it again.

"MARY."

I'm using it pretty hard myself, Mary. Here's hoping it helps.

A PRAYER FOR A COMMON DAY

My Unseen Friend—
Life Source, whom some call God,
But for whose being I have found no name,
Help me today!

This day, I think, will be a common day,
Devoid of venture, risk or thrill or show;
Eight working hours, plodding in a row
Like lagging sheep, whose herder I must be—
And You, who made me, know I hate such days!

I can face danger or the press of haste,
Cruel shock or sudden uproar and alarm,
Or I can laugh and play the merry clown
Or act a part to mask some desperate need—
But something limps in me when days are dull.

I fret and whimper at monotony,
I sulk and shirk when life's procession drags,
I weep great tears of pity for myself
And snarl with anger at each fancied wrong.

And hate my brother and the world and You.

And so I ask your help this common day—
Help me keep sweet when there is none to see,
Help me be patient though there be no praise,
And brave without the spotlight of applause,
And honest, in the secret, unseen acts.

Help me to forget my foolish, strutting self,
Forget my childish need for risks and thrills,
And let me be a part of You today,
A part of life's eternal urge and plan,
As trees and songbirds and oceans are a part.

Help me be simple, like the growing grain,
That grows alike in sun or rain or wind,
And steadfast, like the deep enduring soil,
Whose service never slackens through the years,
Nor ever reckons up the gain or loss.

So help me see that every day is rare;
And still my fretting with your boundless peace,
Dear Friend, who I can feel but cannot see—
For I am like a spoiled and peevish child
Who pouts at being in a quiet room. Amen.

Isn't It So?

Some men haven't even the ambition to loaf properly.

No man can support a new-fashioned wife on an old-fashioned salary.

Women wouldn't marry men for their money if they could discover a way to get it otherwise.

The automobile may be ruining the younger generation, but there is no question about what the younger generation is doing to the automobile.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Generally the men who like to talk in public are great bores.

At every public gathering they try to find some excuse for getting up to address the assemblage.

These self-appointed speakers seldom say much worth hearing.

The so-called ready talker is wordy and that is about all.

To say something worth while take time and study to the point of weeding out a lot of unnecessary words that might be said or unimportant points in a talk that fill the time without filling the mind.

Seldom do you find a man forcing himself to be heard unless he has some personal object in being seen and heard.

He wants to advertise himself or his hobby or put across something that will be of personal or financial benefit to him.

Always in crowds you will find this self-seeking man.

Perhaps you are a person of this kind.

And you are considered a bore.

Your stand might be better and you might have the faith and confidence of the people to a greater degree if you were more reticent about public speaking.

You talk so much people are tired of listening to you.

Upright simplicity is the deepest wisdom, and perverse craft the merest shallowness.—Barrow.
